THE MAYORALTY.

MASS MEETING AT THE EXCHANGE.

Report of the People's Committee.

Daniel F. Tiemann Nominated for Mayor.

HE IS INDORSED UNANIMOUSLY.

Speeches by Messrs. James E. Cooley, W. H. Anthon, Joseph Hoxie, John C. Montgomery and Recorder Smith.

LETTERS, RESOLUTIONS AND ENTHUSIASM.

The response to the call of the Committee appointed by the Exchange meeting, held on Saturday, last, to agree upon a candidate for the Mayoralty, to meet yesterday afternoon at the same place, was numerous, harmonious and enthusiastic. The time announced for hearing the report of the Committee was half-past 3. Fifteen minutes before that time there were not more than five hundred persons present, but when the hour had arrived the front of the Exchange building, of the buildings opposite, and Wall-street, from below Pearl to far above William-street were crowded with people. The omnibuses, carts and carriages were obliged to turn into other streets, and it was all but impossible for a pedestrian to force his way up or down through the dense mass. The passages leading to the main hall of the Exchange were crammed to such an extent as to render it a task of extreme difficulty for the Committee and the gentlemen who were to organize the meeting and address the people to gain the little table on the upper abutment, where the officers and orators were to stand. Nevertheless they reached it, and then

Mr. Jarvis came forward and said: Fellow-Citizens: As Chairman of the Committee appointed at your meeting on the 14th inst., I now have the honor of calling this meeting to order, and nominate as your Chairman Mr. Jas. E. Cooley.

Cries of "Three cheers for Cooley," followed by vehement cheering.

The nomination was put to the meeting and confirmed amid loud applause.

Mr. Cooley, on taking the chair, was greeted with repeated cheers.

Mr. Cooley said:

Fellow-Citizens: I feel deeply penetrated by these flattering manifestations of your kind regard. I am aware, however, that this applause flows from the noble sentiment which pervades this vast assemblage in favor of a united effort for City Reform, [cheers,] rather than for any string in the human bosom which my feeble abilities are capable of vibrating. I thank you for the distinguished honor which you have conferred upon me in selecting me to preside over your deliberations on an occasion of so much public interest, fraught with the animating hope that the day of our deliverance from the odious thraldom imposed upon us by a corrupt and unprincipled executive public officer—[cheers]—and his detestable coadjutors—is drawing nigh. [Cheers and confusion, caused by the excitement of some obstreperous dissentient in the crowd.] We are assembled to consider, to some extent, the deplorable condition of our municipal affairs. If we draw within the compass of attentive scrutiny numerous official characters connected with the various departments of the City Government, what do we see? We behold a dangerous band of incompetent, irresponsible, unscrupulous, bad men, [cheers,] not seeking how they may best subserve the public interests by a faithful discharge of public duty, but incessantly scheming and plotting together daily how they may most effectually rob the people. These despicable creatures, with a vast multitude of thieves, burglars,—[laughter]—pickpockets and assassins are supposed to be led on and encouraged to perpetrate the most diabolical deeds by a treacherous, cowardly and most unmitigated demagogue—[cheers. A voice—"Give him another one!"]—himself occupying the highest civic seat, and capable of every conceivable enormity in the catalogue of crime. [Loud cheers. A voice—"That is so." Another—"Yes, tell the truth and shame the devil."] Such, fellow-citizens, being the conceded character of your rulers, the administrators of your government and laws, is it strange that your taxes annually increase to an extent which strikes every property-holder with astonishment and fills the whole community with alarm? Is it strange that your streets, encumbered with filth, are the incessant scenes of theft, pillage and assassination, and that life and liberty, even, are held in very light regard? Is it strange that your corporation credit daily declines, and that your noble City itself has become a byword and a reproach among civilized men? Fellow-citizens, we have reached a crisis in the local government of this City, which we must look sternly in the face and manfully meet, or we must fall ignominiously into a condition worse than human bondage, to rise no more. [Cheers.] The present incumbent of the Mayoralty claims to be the regular candidate of the Democratic Party for reelection, but he has been openly repudiated recently, in a series of resolutions condemning in toto his Anti-Democratic doctrines, ["Bravo" and cheers,] which were passed almost by acclamation in the General Committee of his own party. ["Good" and cheers.] Therefore he cannot be sustained at the approaching election on party grounds. As a man he is utterly faithless and untrustworthy, and I must inevitably fall by the dead weight of his own reprehensible conduct. [Laughter and applause.] The people have at last determined to take this matter into their own hands, and put into the field a candidate of their own choice. Such a one, worthy to fill the exalted station of Mayor of the City of New-York, and in whom all good men of all parties may confide the important trust, is about to be proposed to this meeting. Fellow-citizens, my humble name having appeared in connection with this subject, it has been suggested that a declination more in terms than was expressed in a statement recently published would be desirable, I now beg to declare that I am not in any sense a candidate for the Mayoralty, or any other office. [Enthusiastic cheering, which lasted for some moments: cries of "Good for Cooley," &c.] At the same time I would, also, publicly express a renewal of my thanks to the large and highly respectable body of my fellow-citizens, who tendered me the nomination in a manner so highly honorable to themselves, and in terms so unexceptionable to me, that I shall never cease to hold it in high regard—satisfied, as I am, that the nomination was made, as set forth in the address of the American Convention which accompanied it, at a sacrifice, to some extent, of party principles, and with the patriotic view of effecting some reform in the municipal concerns of our City. [Cheers.] What influence my position here to-day may have with that section of our worthy fellow-citizens, it is quite impossible for me to say. I trust, however, that, forgetting all that is past, they may be found rallying to our support in the impending hour of need, and that the City government may thereby be effectually purged from the bestial corruption and uncleanness that now so conspicuously pollute and defile it.

The Chairman inquired the further pleasure of the meeting.

A Voice—The nomination.

Another Voice.—No, the report of the Committee.

Mr. Anthon then said:

Fellow-Citizens: At an immense assemblage of the electors of the City of New-York, held at this place on the 14th day of November—an assemblage which convened together spontaneously, I may almost say, for the purpose of expressing their approval of measures calculated to reform the administration of our municipal affairs, and to hurl from power that corrupt and ambitious demagogue, Fernando Wood—[loud cheers]—a Committee was appointed for the purpose of reporting to an adjourned meeting to be held at this place at some time to be fixed, the name of a suitable person to be voted for by the electors of the City of New-York, as the Mayor of this great Metropolis. That Committee have carefully performed the duties so highly responsible, and so highly honorable, confided to their charge, and the result of their deliberations I shall now give you, if such be your pleasure—[Cries of "Yes."]—in the report which I am about to read. I would, in the first place, however, remark that an extended address upon this great and overwhelmingly important subject has been prepared, which will not be read to you this afternoon, because there are several eminent speakers who are about to address you. That address will, however, be in due time printed, will be printed in the City papers, and will be generally and universally circulated throughout the length and breadth of this metropolis. [Cheers and cries of "Good."] The report of the Committee is as follows:

The Committee appointed at the mass meeting of citizens held at the Merchants' Exchange, on the 14th inst., to confer with other Committees representing various political organizations, and report the name of a suitable candidate for the Mayoralty, have performed the duty assigned to them with careful deliberation, and a profound sense of their responsibility to the community. They announce that they have accepted the issue which the citizens of New-York have been dared to meet, between the continuance of the present corrupt administration of the affairs of the City, and a thorough and radical reform of crying abuses, by presenting for the suffrages of their fellow-citizens, for Mayor, the name of Daniel F. Tiemann, [vehement and prolonged cheering,] a man whose long life of industry, integrity, and public usefulness in our midst, is a guaranty that, so far as an honest executive officer can restore the prosperity and character of this oppressed City to its former high reputation, his election, as the people's candidate, will accomplish an object so dear to every inhabitant of this great metropolis.

New-York, Nov. 17, 1857.

Signed by J. Jarvis, and all the other members of the Committee.

A person in the crowd moved that the report be adopted by acclamation.

The Chairman said it was moved and seconded by the whole meeting [laughter] that the nomination be approved by acclamation.

The question was put and answered by a universal and prolonged "Aye," which was followed by cheers.

The Chairman then said he was sorry to say he was quite ill, and should be obliged to retire from the chair, but he should have the pleasure to be succeeded by a man that was honored by the whole City, the whole country—he had almost said the whole world—for his fame was world-wide. He meant Peter Cooper, [cheers,] who would come to time and the word.

Mr. Cooper came forward and was received with the warmest and most enthusiastic greetings. He removed his hat, but, in compliance with friendly wishes of the crowd, was induced to replace it.

A call for three cheers for "Peter Cooper," was earnestly responded to.

He announced that the resolutions would now be offered for the consideration of the meeting.

Mr. Anthon again approached and read the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the citizens of New-York, in mass meeting here assembled, will make one more effort to put down fraud and corruption in the Municipal Government, and with this object in view hereby ratify and indorse the nomination of Daniel F. Tiemann as the People's Candidate for Mayor, and earnestly appeal to all men of all shades of feeling and avocations to throw aside the prejudices and trammels of party, and join in the struggle to elevate to this high position a man whose public as well as his private life is a sure guaranty that the executive duties of the office will be discharged with energy and with honesty, and without fear, favor, or fraud.

Resolved, That all classes in this City are suffering from the derangement of business; merchant, mechanic and laborer alike; and that no substantial relief can be afforded until confidence is restored in the honesty of those who expend the public revenue. Then private capitalists will be ready to invest their surplus means in new enterprises; the wheels of human industry will once more be set in motion, and the laboring classes, re-asserting their position as self-supporting men, will reject with indignation all largesses of food purchased with the public funds, as equally demoralizing to them and injurious to that respectable and useful class of tradesmen who now supply them with the necessaries of life.

Resolved, That any citizen who, in this crisis of public and private credit, neglects to record his vote in favor of the People's Candidate for Mayor, is a traitor alike to the interests of himself, his fellow-citizens, and of those who are to succeed us in the marts of commerce and industry; and that the plain duty of every good citizen is to render his verdict against the longer continuance in power of a man who has reduced this great City to a sad spectacle of inefficiency, riot and extravagance, and impending bankruptcy.

Resolved, That, for the purpose of protecting the rights and interests of the people in the coming contest, an Executive Committee be constituted of the following citizens:

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

—and that this Committee be requested to use all honorable efforts to rescue the control of the City Government from the hands of those who have proved themselves entirely unworthy of the public confidence.

Resolved, That the Committee have power to add to their number.

Resolved, That when this meeting adjourn, it adjourn to meet at the Academy of Music on next Tuesday evening, the 24th inst., at 7½ o'clock.

The Chairman called for the ayes on the resolutions, and they were carried unanimously.

Mr. Jas. M. Smith, the Recorder, who occupied a prominent position near the Chairman, was loudly called for.

After taking off his hat, putting it on again at the request of the crowd, and mounting the table amid cheers, he said:

Mr. Chairman and fellow citizens—I have not come here to-day for the purpose of fully discussing the merits of the question which has drawn together this extraordinary assembly which I now see before me. It is one of those occasions which, for the credit of the form of government under which we live, and for the credit of the people of this great city, has never, on any other occasion, presented itself. It is the first time that we have ever been compelled, owing to the gross corruption of the chief magistrate, whom, by our own voices and votes, we have placed in that responsible position, to assemble together for the purpose of denouncing him as an ingrate, as a traitor, and as a robber. [Cheers.] The time has gone by when we should mince these matters of fact thus presented to us in bold relief. It has been heralded through the public press that the Chief Magistrate whom we have has been charged as a robber, as a forger, as a thief, and as a swindler—[loud cheers]—disgraceful to us as citizens. And the only reason why it has happened is because we could not believe, when these charges were first made, that a man whose character was thus stamped dare ask of his fellow-citizens that he should be elevated to a place of public responsibility and trust. We have stayed at home for the reason that we have been met at the polls with ruffians, who have not permitted us to exercise the right of citizens. [Cheers, and cries of "That's so."]

A Voice—They will not do it any more.

Mr. Smith—No, they will not do it any more, thank God, we have a law and a police now that are not under the control of Fernando Wood, and citizens at the election can walk to the polls without having their heads broken and being knocked down and trampled upon by hired ruffians and bullies, who are under the pay and form the guard of Fernando Wood. [Cheers.] I state that, fellow-citizens, that you may not be deterred by any misunderstanding from coming forward now to the rescue of this City from the grasp of this man and his minions. It is but a short time ago that through the streets of our City and into the office which I have the honor to occupy, when I had issued process against this bold, bad man, to bring him up to answer for the crime which he had committed, that he was surrounded by his own Police force, to whom he gave directions not to permit him to be taken from what he termed his citadel. And those who had been detailed from the Court to carry out its process and secure respect to its authority, came through the streets, staggering, bleeding, many of them in a condition utterly helpless, and this done through his directions by the men whom he had around him especially for that purpose. Is there another city in this Union, or upon the face of the civilized globe, that would have permitted such a man as that to have remained for one moment in the office which he disgraced? [Cries of "No."] I have been ashamed for the credit—I say for the credit—of the people of this City, that they did not rise en masse for the purpose of putting down a man who has so trampled on the people's rights. [Cheers and cries of "Good."] These things, fellow-citizens, are matters which are not merely the work of politicians. It is the first time that I have ever appeared to address an assemblage on a political question that was not a purely Democratic assemblage. I am a Democrat. That is the party to which I belong. [A Voice—"Good boy!"] But I am not sufficiently a Democrat to forget the duties which I owe to the people by sustaining a man that I know to be so thoroughly corrupt as Fernando Wood. [Loud cheers.] Fernando Wood is not the nominee of the Democracy of the City of New-York. [Cries of "No, never."] Fernando Wood, I say, to the credit of the party to which I belong, is not the nominee of the respectable portion of the Democratic Party, and I am sure that if the question was put to them this day he would not receive one vote out of ten for the high office which he holds. [Shouts of "Never."] He is the nominee of a Committee that had been packed; he is the nominee of men who were placed in the position of nominating him by the gangs who guarded the entrance to the polls to prevent any one not in his favor from depositing his vote. That is the way he got it, and when they libel the Democratic Party by telling us that Fernando Wood is the choice of that party, we hurl it back upon him and say that he is only the choice of the set of thieves and ruffians who degrade that party. [Exclamations of "That's it," and cheers.] Do not be discouraged because the Democratic Party have triumphed by some 16,000 majority in this City. Don't say that this man has such a grasp and hold upon the people of this City, and that he has such bad, bold men, to back him, that there is no use in us, as citizens, coming forward. That is not the way to win. Say to yourselves that you have now the chance to vote, as you will have, and remember that the ballots shall be properly counted also. He shall not cheat again for the purpose of succeeding. If it be necessary, the power exists, and should be invoked, that these ballots shall be counted with a revolver at the head of every canvasser. The people are awake in relation to this matter. The Democracy are with the citizens in relation to this matter. I say to you, fellow-citizens, they denounce this man and disown him. It is only that clique which surrounds him, and which is tied to him by his promises to place them in office and power who sustain him; and even these, when they found that he had not the power to do so, even these, the material of his own corrupt ranks, are now shaking him off, and, when it comes to the test, he will not be able to muster a corporal's guard compared with what he had had. [Loud cheers.] I will not detain you fellow-citizens. I say the Democratic Party are with you to cheer you on in your efforts, and I am very glad that for one we have a standard bearer who is a Democrat. Because otherwise it would go very much against us. I propose three cheers for our candidate and his success.

[Loud and continued cheering]

Amid cries for Hoxie, and still louder calls for Whiting, Mr. Joseph Hoxie ascended to the chair amid much applause.

Some confusion occurred at this precise moment which rendered Mr. Hoxie's opening remarks somewhat inaudible.

He said: The work goes bravely on. At this late hour of the evening and on this inclement day, I naturally hesitate to detain this mighty assemblage of Freemen that I see before me. I do not know whether you expect me to address that part of them down at Pearl-street or those up at Nassau. I have not quite voice enough to reach from one extremity to the other. I wish I had, and that I could speak loud enough to be heard by every freeman of the City of New-York, and to exhort him, as he esteems the character of his City and the reputation of her inhabitants, her peace, her safety, her prosperity, to unite with us and make one noble effort worthy of our great City, to redeem her from an administration which I will not attempt to characterize. I do not mean to say anything about the present incumbent of the Mayoralty. I mean to leave him to the worst company there is upon the face of the earth—[laughter]—I mean to leave him with himself—[renewed laughter]—and if his past reputation, his mercantile transactions—[laughter]—his whole public life will commend him to your approbation, I desire you to go and vote for him. [Great Laughter.] I shan't. I don't love him. I am limited here, my fellow citizens, and I am glad of it, for my voice will soon be gone. We are now under the five minutes' rule. This City is not to be redeemed from the degradation into which it has fallen, by long speeches. Something else has got to be done. It ain't talking. It is working. You must go to work if you want to save the City. I want to say a word or two about the man who has been selected as our standard-bearer. This is a great occasion. I should not have been here to talk to you if the choice had fallen upon a man belonging to that political party to which I have always belonged, but I rejoice to come here and give in my adhesion, my voice, my vote, my heart,—all that I have, in favor of a man who has always been a constant, a determined, and an honest Democrat. [Cheers.] I have known Daniel F. Tiemann some 25 years, and I am astonished to find that there is any man in the City of New-York, who loves her, and loves her honor and her glory, who does not know him. But I have been asked to-day two or three times, who is Daniel F. Tiemann? Well, I can answer that question in two ways, and I can bring it home to your understanding better, perhaps, in this way, than in any other. I tell you, my friends and fellow-citizens, he is a sort of a Peter Cooper man, [cheers,] and that is the reason I confide in him and love him. That is the reason I want him for Mayor of this great City, and I intend he shall be too, if anything I can do will effect it. There is another test, and if anything can give you more fully and emphatically my opinion of him, it is this: Daniel F. Tiemann is a man that I would be glad to have for the executor of my estate, if I had one, [laughter,] and the guardian of my children. I should be happy, even in dying, if I knew that a man of his integrity, of his unimpeached and unimpeachable character, would have the charge of those dear to me in life, when I have been called away. [Cheers and cries of "Good for old Hoxie."] Such a man is Daniel F. Tiemann. The other man you probably know something about. [Laughter.] It ain't my province to enlighten you. [A Voice—"No, we know enough already."] Gentlemen, if there was ever a time when every man in the City of New-York, that regards her reputation, was called upon to exert that power that he possesses to redeem her from the disgrace into which she has fallen, that time has now arrived, and this audience before me satisfies me that they believe, as I do, that the time has arrived for united, for determined action. Sir, I thank the Committe to whom was intrusted this important duty for presenting a man upon whom all the honesty and intelligence of the City can unite. I thank the gentleman who occupied the chair that you now do, before you took possession of it,—I thank him for the noble and disinterested conduct which he has displayed on this occasion. I am not disappointed that he did it. I know the man, and I would have gone into this contest as heartily and as joyfully for James E. Cooley as for Daniel F. Tiemann, both of them eminently worthy of any place to which your suffrages could exalt them. Honest, patriotic, disinterested, glorious fellows—a credit to the City which claims them as her citizens. And, gentlemen, I appeal to you—I submit it to you—whether his (Mr. Cooley's) conduct on this occasion has not shown him to be equal to your high expectations? [Cries of "Yes;"] It is no small honor for a man to be nominated as the candidate for Mayor of the great commercial City of the Western World, which is ours; and it requires a little self-denial, and a great deal of public spirit and patriotism, to decline these honors when they are offered to us. Mr. Cooley has shown you to-day by his disinterested conduct that there are things of far more consequence to him than any personal aggrandisement. While the Mayoralty of the City would, no doubt, be acceptable to him or to any other of the citizens of the land, for it is a high office, he was more anxious to redeem the City, to save the sinking reputation of the City which claims him for a citizen than to gratify any personal ambition of his own. He has endeared himself more to me than before. I honored and loved him before; I honor and love him now better than before, for his manly conduct. [Cheers.] I happened, on this occasion, to have no candidate, but other people had. And now let every man imitate the example set by Mr. Cooley to-day. You have an honest man, a competent man, a man who has been faithful in every trust where you have placed him, and a man who will be faithful in every position in which you shall place him.

While selecting our Mayor, there are other things, dear friends, to which I would like to ask your attention, as I may not have another opportunity. It is as important for you to select honest men for Aldermen of the city as for the highest municipal office in your gift. Now, I ask you to do the same thing with regard to Aldermen that you have done with regard to the mayoralty. Sacrifice any little feeling that you may have of private friendship to the public good. This is not a time to stand upon small matters. It is not a time to insist upon the nomination of this man or that. Is he honest? Is he faithful? Will he properly discharge the duties of his office? That is all I want to know. I am going to vote for a man for mayor that I have voted against all the days of my life. I thank God that I have been spared to do that, for I never asked for a more honest or worthy man than Daniel F. Tiemann. There is another matter which we are very apt to lose sight of, because it is less connected with politics. But to a man who has lived in this City as long as I have, and who believes and knows that there is no safety for the institutions of the country, but in the education of the people, and of all the people of the country, our public schools will be very dear to him. It is very important that you select proper men for your school officers. The present Board modestly asks you this year, when we are ground down almost to the earth, and some of us into the earth, with the oppressive taxes laid upon us, for $1,250,000 to support the public schools of this City. Gentlemen, if this is allowed to go on, the whole system will be destroyed, for I tell you the tax-payers of this City, burdened as they are, groaning under the weight of this tax will free themselves from it, and the glorious institutions of our public schools will be destroyed. We must insist on more economy. We do not require to educate these children for other employments in the world. We do not require an expenditure of $9,000 a year, which is one of the items in this estimate of $1,250,000, for piano-fortes. Why, you, gentlemen, who have got to put your hands in your pockets and pay this money, net one in every ten of you has the luxury of a piano-forte at home for your own children. You are not commanded to love your neighbors any better than yourself. If you love them as well as yourself that is all that is asked of you. Mr. Hoxie dwelt on the necessity of electing honest and economical school officers, urged the need of general and untiring action, called on the merchants to use their influence with their book-keepers, their clerks, their porters, their carmen, on the working-people to use their influence with their fellow-workmen, on each of them to use his influence with his neighbor, to save the City from the disgrace of having such a Mayor as Fernando Wood; and he was satisfied that if they only made an effort worthy of themselves, this glorious old City would be redeemed from the degradation it had suffered at the hands of that wretch. [Loud applause.]

Amid renewed cries for Whiting, an old gentleman mounted the table, and was proceeding to address the assemblage, when some one asked his name. He said his name was John C. Montgomery, and he was not ashamed of it. He was then desired to put on his hat, but he expressed his preference not to put it on, though it had already almost been knocked into a cocked hat. He proceeded to state that he had been called General Montgomery; that, when in Pennsylvania, it was quite usual for his Irish fellow-citizens to regard him as a son of the gallant Richard Montgomery, who fell in the service of his adopted country, before the heights of Abraham; that bets had been made on the subject; that committees had been appointed to wait on him to learn the fact whether he was or was not the son of that Montgomery, and that it always happened that the persons betting that he was not were the winners. He had seven reasons to prove he was not; the first of which was, that General Montgomery never had a child, male or female. [Laughter.] The speaker said he would not further detain the meeting, but expressed his intention of being at the meeting in the Academy of Music, and he would probably tip them a stave there. He had not found any man of any party who would do such violence to his conscience as to assert that Fernando Wood was an honest man, and when he had the pleasure of meeting them again he would give them chapter and verse for it.

Mr. Anthon then read the following letter, which was warmly applauded:

To the Electors of the City of New-York:

The undersigned, taking great interest, as citizens, in the wise and honest administration of municipal affairs, in the enforcement of a good police, and in the preservation of the peace and order of the City, hail with gratification the nomination of Daniel F. Tiemann for the Mayoralty. Many of us have long known him, and have been familiarly acquainted with his capacities, character and habits in his business relations, and we believe him peculiarly fitted to discharge the duties of that office in the present public emergency. We know, above all, that he has that highest competency for this great public trust, in this—he is an honest man of unspotted personal character, a man whose word is the bond of truth, a citizen who has filled many public trusts with a fidelity never questioned. He will bring to the Chief Magistracy of the City universal confidence in his integrity and certain assurance that this great office will be lifted above the jobbing and corruption which too often infect the City Government, and will be administered honestly and well.

Nomination of Members of the Common Council.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Sir: The nomination of Daniel F. Tiemann as candidate for the office of Mayor of our City, should call forth the unanimous approbation and grateful thanks of all honest and upright citizens; should insure the hearty coöperation and united efforts of all who wish to see our City delivered from the thraldom and evil influences to which she has been subjected; to consummate that nomination by their votes, and triumphantly to induct him into office. If there be only unanimity of action among the honest, the intelligent, the well-disposed of our citizens, the result cannot be doubtful. But in electing Mr. Tiemann to the office of Mayor the work of our citizens will be accomplished but in part. It would be unjust to Mr. Tiemann, and our efforts at reform would fail of success if, as Mayor, he should be left to contend single-handed with, and to have his decisions overruled by a Wood majority in the Common Council. This must not be. We must nominate and elect Aldermen and Councilmen who will sustain our Chief Magistrate and prevent his measures from being thwarted.

Allow me to suggest, through your paper, to the Nominating Committee who have so nobly performed their duty in presenting the name of Daniel F. Tiemann as their nominee for Mayor, to continue the good work, and to make it their business to see that in every Aldermanic and Senatorial District Committees be appointed for the nomination of such candidates for Aldermen and Councilmen respectively as will unite with Mr. Tiemann in stemming the torrent of corruption which is sweeping over our City, and in restoring our City Government to its pristine vigor and integrity, independent of the trammels of party influence.

A DEMOCRAT OF THE OLD SCHOOL.

Symptom and Signal of Distress.

From the Daily News (Mayor Wood's organ) of yesterday.

Certain officials of the General Government, we learn, are busy in their efforts to disturb the harmony of the Democracy, and defeat, if possible, the regularly nominated Democratic candidate for Mayor. A sense of honor, if nothing more, should induce these gentlemen to act with and not against the party, to support the united action of the regularly constituted authorities of the party, and do all things towards strengthening and securing for it unity of purpose and success, and in the false and disorganizing acts of the gentlemen referred to, we desire to know if it meets with the approbation or concurrence of the Government officers at Washington. It is well to know on what ground we all stand.

Political.

The Democrats of the Fourth District have nominated Rob. McIntire for Police Justice. Of the Sixth, they have nominated Daniel Clarke.

The "Democratic Americans" of the Sixteenth Ward, assembled last evening at Schaefer's Hotel, in the Seventh-avenue, and nominated Alderman Peter Fullmer, as the regular candidate for Alderman, and Edwin Smith for School Commissioner. A. G. H. Duganne and other gentlemen addressed the meeting. A Committee was appointed to obtain contributions for the poor of the Sixteenth Ward. Jacob L. Moore, Esq., was President of the meeting, which adjourned to Friday next, when other Ward nominations will be made.

☞ As our advertising columns have shown from day to day, the list of candidates—except School officers—for the December election, which occurs a week from next Tuesday, is nearly completed. The list includes as good men and as great rascals as the City can produce.

THE WATER-STREET MURDER.

Death of Another Victim—Several Suspected Parties Arrested—The Murderers Supposed to be Spanish Convicts—Coroner's Inquest Continued.

Susan Dempsey, the Scotch girl, one of the parties stabbed in the Water-street dance-house, on Thursday morning, has since died at the New-York Hospital, from internal hemorrhage. This makes the second death in connection with this horrid tragedy. The unknown man who was killed outright has not been identified yet, and the body is still kept at the Fourth Ward Station-house for identification. The name "Andrew McManus," found written on the back of his memorandum book, it is presumed, will yet lead to his recognition. One person who saw the body yesterday, says that he thinks the deceased belonged in Rochester, N. Y., and worked on board a canal-boat. The injured parties now remaining at the Hospital are still considered in a critical condition. During Thursday night and yesterday the Police of the Fourth Ward continued their search for the murderers. Nine persons altogether have been arrested on suspicion of being implicated in the murder. Thus far nothing has been elicited positively identifying more than one of the parties arrested, and only three have been detained on suspicion. Two of those detained refuse to give their names. The other one gives his name as Miguel Aguilara. One of the girls belonging to the dance-house identified this individual as a frequent visitor at the house, in company with the men who committed the murder. On the persons of those arrested were found daggers, the blades of some of which were nine inches in length, and other murderous instruments. The Police think they have learned sufficient to leave no doubt but that the murderers belonged to the gang of Spanish convicts and disbanded soldiers who reached this port about a month ago, on board the Spanish brig Emile, bound to Spain, but which put into this port in distress. The discharged convicts were those who had been sent to Cuba for political offences, and the soldiers were a part of those who rendered themselves obnoxious in the insurrection at Saragossa, and were sent for punishment to Cuba. They have been kept at the expense of the Spanish Government, and are under the charge of the Spanish Consul. Most of them are quartered in Brooklyn. The Coroner has addressed a note to the Spanish Consul for the names and whereabouts of these parties, and intends to have them singly confronted with the witnesses for identification.

Mark Driscoll, the proprietor of the dance-house, was recalled and testified as follows: There were only two Italians in the house, they have been in the habit of coming to my place for six weeks; at times they were dressed like midshipmen with blue coats; the man who stabbed the girl had no quarrel with her; it was the tall man who stabbed my brother-in-law; I saw him stab him; the man whom the small Italian stabbed had no quarrel with any one; the little Italian who fourteen the deck when I went outside must have stabbed the deceased, and the man from Rhode Island, one directly after the other; I have had some conversation with my brother-in-law in the Hospital since the murder was committed; he says he could recognize the Italians or foreigners who stabbed him.

The three Spanish prisoners who had been arrested on suspicion of being implicated in the murder were each shown to the witness, but he was unable to identify either of them.

Isabella Anderson, sworn—I live in the house of Mr. Driscoll, No. 277½ Water-street; I have lived there the past two years; I saw the two Spaniards come into the house on the night of the murder; I have seen them there frequently before; About half-past twelve o'clock Wednesday night the two Spaniards came to the house; they both stood opposite the fire when they came in; I was then sitting beside the landlady on a bench when the stoutest of the Spaniards pointed to me; the tallest Spaniard then called me up stairs; when I went up he gave me a quarter of a dollar; I turned down stairs immediately, when he followed after me; I had no criminal connection with the man, because he did not give me money enough; when we came down he caught hold of me in the hall-way; I got away from him and ran into the sitting-room; I fastened the door and he could not come in; on entering the bar-room the landlord asked me what was the matter; the Spaniard said something but I could not understand what he said; I saw nothing of the murder as I remained in the sitting-room till it was all over; I did not see the landlord's brother-in-law at all; I should know the two Italians if I should see them again; the Spaniard only caught hold of my dress in the hall, when I pulled away and ran into the sitting-room; he did not draw any knife on me; I kept the two shillings which the man gave me; I do not know the names of the two men; about two weeks before the murder the men passed our house in company with several other men; they looked in the house, but did not come in; I cannot identify either of the prisoners as parties whom I have ever seen at Mr. Driscoll's.

Catharine Wiley, sworn—I reside with Mr. Driscoll in Water-street; I have lived there five years; I have seen the Italians who were at the house on the night of the murder, there frequently before; I came into the bar-room at the time of the row; Mr. Driscoll and a Spaniard were quarreling about a quarter of a dollar; I heard Isabella Anderson call for help; the bar-tender, Mr. Driscoll's brother-in-law, ran up to her; the small Spaniard attempted to run up to the other Spaniard, but Mr. Driscoll took hold of him to prevent him; the Spaniard then drew a knife on Mr. Driscoll; Mr. Driscoll ran back towards the street door, and seized a beer bottle and struck the Spaniard across the neck; the Spaniard immediately turned around and stabbed the man who was standing next to me; the name of the man he stabbed was Arnold James; Mr. James and another girl and myself ran into another room and locked the door against the Spaniard; I saw the tall Spaniard endeavoring to stab Mr. Driscoll's brother-in-law with a dagger; as soon as I saw the knife I ran out of the house; after them urder was committed and the murderers had fled, I heard Mr. Driscoll's brother-in-law cry "Murder," and saw him fall on the corner of Oak and Roosevelt streets; I do not know the names of the two Spaniards.

To a Juror—Mr. Driscoll struck the Spaniards when they went out of the door; the Spaniards did not come back again; I was not tipsy on that night.

The witness was unable to identify either of the prisoners as persons who had ever been to Mr. Driscoll's place. One of them looked like one of the murderers, but had not as full a face and brilliant eye.

Isabella Anderson recalled—I recognize Miguel Agelaer, the Spaniard present, as one of the party who was in the habit of coming to Mr. Driscoll's place with the parties who committed the murder; to the best of my belief he was not in the house on the night of the murder.

The Coroner, through an interpreter, told the prisoner Miguel Agelaer, that unless he told the names and whereabouts of his companions he would have him put in prison, but if he gave the desired information he would let him go. The prisoner refused to give any information, and he was ordered by the Coroner to be locked up.

Mary Ann Curran, sworn—I have lived at Driscoll's the past six years; I was in the bar-room on the night of the murder; a little after twelve o'clock I saw the two Spaniards

Banquet to the Officers of the U. S. Frigate Niagara.

Causes of the Failure to Launch the Leviathan.

The Cunard steamship Niagara arrived at Boston on Wednesday afternoon. Her mails were dispatched in the steamboat train, vid Stonington, and reached this City yesterday morning. The Financial news, as already announced by telegraph, is of importance. Full details will be found below.

The United States frigate Niagara, Capt. HUDSON, left Plymouth on Thursday morning, Nov. 5, for the United States. Her Majesty's ship Impregnable dressed yards, and the hearty cheers of the men were returned by the Americans.

At a meeting of the Eastern Steam Navigation Company, held in London on the 4th inst., it was reported that there was not the least twist or deflection in the Leviathan, and that she sits as fairly on her cradles as she did on the morning of the day of the attempted launch. Although her position is a few feet nearer the river, yet she lies on her old ground, and is no more liable to settle down than she has been for the last twelve months. The whole work remains firm and solid. Some alterations, however, are to be made in the chains on the river, when her launch is again attempted. The change in the ship's name was only determined on the day previous to the attempted launch.

A letter from Capt. MCCLINTOCK, commander of Lady FRANKLIN'S expedition, has been received. It is dated on board the yacht Fox, lat. 71°, off Cape Cranstown, close at Uppernavik, Aug. 6. The gallant commander writes in high spirits—his ship is good, his provisions are good, and his men are all that could be desired One of the seamen, who appeared consumptive, was sent home.

A good deal of excitement was caused in Liverpool on Wednesday, the 4th inst., particularly amongst seafaring people, by the report that on the voyage to Liverpool, the captain and officers of the American ship Isaac Webb had behaved with great cruelty to some of the crew, and that one man (WILLIAMS) had died in consequence. Five of the seamen were taken by some of the detective police to the office of the American Consul, who commenced an investigation into the affair, but found that the statements of the men were so vague and confused that he could do nothing with them. The captain and officers denied that they used unnecessary severity, and state that the man WILLIAMS, who was unable to perform seaman's duty, died a natural death, and was buried at sea.

We read in the London Post:

"Mr. JOSEPH RODNEY CROSKEY having resigned this office, the duties of which are now discharged by Mr. WM. THOMPSON, the merchants and tradesmen of the town are about to present Mr. CROSKEY with a testimonial in appreciation of the services he has rendered to the shipping interests of the port from time to time, during the number of years he has acted as Consul. An influential committee has been formed, with the Mayor of the borough as chairman, the Town-Clerk as treasurer, and one of the borough Justices as secretary. Apart from the personal compliment intended, this presentation possesses an interest, as forming another of the numerous manifestations of international friendship and good will existing on the part of this country and the United States."

According to a Belfast journal, a celebrated swindler, known as JOHN JAMES MOORE, has escaped to the United States, and is probably now in New-York. Among the passengers by the Asia was a "Mr. MOORE," and the Belfast paper says:

"There can be no doubt that this is the celebrated JOHN JAMES, and that he did not enter his Christian names on the steamer's books is only in keeping with his already well-earned character for deep cunning. So far as the authorities are concerned, this announcement can remove all doubts as to MOORE'S whereabouts; and it is to be regretted that the bungling of the Cork detective officers permitted the escape of the offender."

We find the following paragraph in the Paris Pays:

"An American Company has been formed for the purpose of substituting a canal across the Isthmus for the railway, which is admitted to be insufficient for the commercial wants of the world. The scheme is believed to be favorably regarded by the maritime powers of Europe. A demand for the concession of the canal has been made at Bogota, and it is this concession which the Government of New-Granada has been authorized to make. We may add that according to the original idea of the project, the canal was to be a neutral property placed under the protection of the powers interested in its formation."

THE FINANCIAL CRISIS.

THE ADVANCE IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND'S RATE OF DISCOUNT AND ITS EFFECT.

From the London Times, (City Article,) Nov. 5.

There has been more general heaviness in the city to-day than at any period during the present pressure, and the funds have experienced a further reaction of three-quarters per cent. Consols for money, which closed last evening at 89⅝ to ¾, were first quoted at 89½ to ⅝. Some renewal of the demand for stock on the part of the public then caused an advance to 89½, but they soon returned to 89¼, and a rather heavy sale finally caused a fall to 89.

The increased feeling of anxiety observable in the city to-day was owing to a general anticipation that an advance of the Bank of England rate of discount to 9 per cent will immediately take place, and the applications were on a scale of sufficient magnitude to warrant the anticipation. There is no doubt, however, that they were considerably increased, not only from the extra requirements consequent upon its being the 4th of the month, but also from the mere belief that a rise is imminent. Should the step be adopted it will afford no reason for a diminution of confidence. On the contrary, it will show that the Bank are determined steadily to maintain a policy which will enable them to continue discounting freely every sound bill that may be presented. As the rate advances the amount of paper in the market is gradually reduced in proportion to the contraction of business, and the supply and demand are thus kept in a state of equilibrium. There is, therefore, not the slightest reason to fear that any establishment possessed of legitimate assets will be exposed to difficulties originating in the condition of the money market. All paper accommodation will be obtainable upon paying the true price for it, and it has already been remarked that, although the difference between the rates of 5 and 9 per cent. per annum—which amounts on three months' bills to 1 per cent.—may be a serious drawback from all mercantile profits, it can never affect the solidity of any house not otherwise imperiled. Up to the present moment the Bank have not made any alteration in their mode of business, either with regard to the length or amount of bills, their terms of advances to the discount houses, or any other point, and there is no ground to suppose that they will do so. An advance in the rate, with a distinction possibly in the charge for those having more than 60 days to run, is all that is likely to be witnessed, and this is calculated to effect every object. The shipments of specie, both to America and India, are even at present far from exhibiting a certainty of profit, and at all events, there must be a limit, and that not a distant one, to the conditions on which they can be continued. Hence it may be supposed that a turn must soon be witnessed, and that the next week or two will be the heaviest time of trial. For houses compromised by the American disasters, as well as those now suffering from the fall in the produce-markets, there can, of course, be no escape from terrible losses; but these are apart from any question regarding the general charge for discount. They must be borne, whether the rate of discount is 3 or 9 per cent., and thus far they have been borne so admirably as to entitle all the parties engaged to the utmost confidence and assistance that can legitimately be afforded them. The only way in which the unavoidable mischief we are called to sustain can be extended or rendered dangerous would be by the occurrence of panic, but it is to be hoped we may be spared the humiliation even of contemplating the possibility of such an event.

From the drain of specie and the pressure for discount which has prevailed during the past 10 days it is to be presumed that the bank accounts which will be made up to-night, and published on Friday evening, will exhibit most unfavorable totals. According to the last return, however, there was still a margin for a reduction of more than a million in the bullion and nearly two millions in the reserve of notes before we should reach the lowest point obtained in 1847, at which period the rate of discount was not carried beyond 8 ₱ cent.

The payments falling due to-day (the 4th of the month) were not unusually heavy. They are understood to have been extremely well met in all quarters.

From the London Times, (City Article,) Nov. 6.

The Bank of England have to-day raised their charge for discount from 8 per cent., which was adopted on the 19th ult., to the unprecedented rate of 9 per cent.

The public were fully prepared for the measure, and in some quarters it had been anticipated even that the movement would have been to 9 per cent. for bills not having more than 60 days to run, and 10 per cent. for longer descriptions. That the latter restriction would not have proved too strong seems already to have been indicated by the fact that the demand has shown little, if any, diminution. As the public have now an amount of notes in their hands equal to any recent average, and business has been for some time undergoing rapid contraction, this continued pressure must be mainly caused by alarm and the consequent desire of every person to be oversupplied. The question whether any further rise will be necessary will therefore greatly depend upon the extent to which this action is carried. If the mercantile community, instead of recognizing from what they have already witnessed of the course of the Bank that they are in no danger of being suddenly shut out from accommodation, will pertinaciously rush to obtain a double share, any inconvenience they may sustain will be of their own creating. The Bank can undertake to provide for wants, but not for fears. There is not the slightest provocative to panic, and whether such a humiliating exhibition of national ignorance and folly can now take place is a question rational people would hardly have entertained a few weeks back. The old opponents of the Bank Charter Act, however, are beginning to bustle in the storm, and it is impossible to feel certain on any point. One of their great modes of creating fright is by pointing to the low state of the reserve of unemployed notes, as if when that is exhausted the Bank would be obliged to cease discounting altogether. But the fact is that the Bank could, under such circumstances, still continue their discounts on as great a scale as ever, since their bills receivable each day of course on the average bring in as large a total as they are ordinarily asked to let out. They could not increase the scale, but no one will suppose that with a contraction of business in all quarters any increase can be required. There is consequently not the shadow of a pretext for any cry for Government palliatives. Some persons who have shown every disposition to assist in allaying idle apprehensions have nevertheless suggested that Government should intimate their readiness to grant a conditional power of relaxation in the same manner as in 1847,—that is, by a notification that upon payment of a certain rate sufficiently high to prevent needless applications the public should be allowed to have any extent of discount they might require, without regard to the increase or decrease of the stock of bullion. But the public have never in the present crisis been without an assurance equally strong. It is admitted that it does not matter how high the rate may be, so long as the certainty is given that money can be had at some rate. When has this certainty been called in question? The very object of the Bank, in each successive advance, is to maintain a position to enable them to comply with every legitimate application, and there can be no doubt of this being effected, unless an insane demand upon them should prevent it. It may, however, be asked, "Why not avert the chance of such folly, by a Government notice that would calm everybody? Grant that in principle it would be humiliating and ridiculous, still it could do no harm, and might prevent much mischief." This announcement can scarcely be requisite. All classes of the public must be well aware that if the nation should so pitiably lose its self-possession as to give way to panic, there is but one remedy, and that the Government will be compelled to adopt it. There can be no need, however, by a formal proceeding, to proclaim a belief that the financial sense of the nation is still so low as to cause the degrading contingency to be regarded not only as possible but probable.

The funds to-day have exhibited fully as much steadiness as could have been anticipated. Under the certainty that a further movement would take place at the Bank they opened at a decline of a quarter per cent., and subsequently experienced another slight fall, but the market was without agitation. Consols for money were first quoted 88⅝ to ¾, from which they advanced to 89. They then remained at 88⅞ to 89 till the breaking up of the Bank Court, when several sales of stock, some of which were alleged to be on account of the Bank, caused a reaction to 88½ to ⅝, which was the final quotation.

In connection with the Bank announcement today no one can fail to see cause of congratulation at the fact of a heavy loan to India having thus far been avoided. Even the assistance already afforded to that country—amounting to three or four millions sterling, since the cessation of the payments ordinarily due from it, must equally, with the specie in course of dispatch, be regarded as a contribution on our part—has seriously aggravated the difficulties of the crisis: and if a loan of five or ten millions in addition had been contracted, we should undoubtedly, for the sake of making everything smooth to the Indian people, and the routine financiers at Calcutta have plunged the entire trade of the empire into confusion. Happily, too, as regards the future, it may be hoped that the advance to 9 per cent. will have the good effect of causing the Home Government to insist that these financiers, before availing themselves of the easy method of drawing upon what they fancy to be the exhaustless resources of England, shall be compelled to attempt the discovery whether a country which, for a long time, has been absorbing silver from us at the rate of six millions per annum, cannot be made to provide in some degree for the cost of its own disturbances. Periods of insurrection are precisely those in which a suspension of specie payments is not only legitimate, but in most cases, as a matter of justice, indispensable; and even if it were an unmixed evil, instead of a salutary precaution, it would be better that the natives of India should be subjected to the slight inconvenience of receiving their dividends and other claims in interest-bearing but temporarily incontrovertible paper, than that the commerce of Europe and America should be convulsed and thousands of families be thrown out of employment, in order that there should be no discomfort on that side, and no interruption to the facilities of hoarding. It is the business of the Indian Government to consider what they would do if they had not the English exchequer to fall upon. Would they abandon the country, or would the wholesome stimulus of necessity yield its usual results? We have supplied men and munitions, and India is rich enough to find money. There is no reason to assume that the issue of a note circulation, even on a large scale—supposing it requisite as a last resource, a circumstance far from certain—would be attended with difficulty. The natives would be found sufficiently keen to estimate the value of a Government note, carrying 6 or 7 per cent. interest, and receivable at par in the course of six or twelve months for revenue dues, and at the same time we should have the satisfaction of knowing that every one with paper of this description in his pocket would feel an access of loyalty and a proportionate desire for the maintenance of order.

An average business has been transacted in the foreign stocks generally, at the depressed prices of yesterday

The final prices of the French Three per Cents on the Paris Bourse this evening were 66f. 80c. for money, and 67f. for the end of the month, showing a decline of only an eighth. The alteration in the Bank of England rate of discount was probably not generally known before the close of business. The private letters state that the bullion in the Bank of France has not experienced during the past week any important alteration. From all places in the continent various sums in specie seem to be in course of transmission to America.

There were no gold withdrawals from the Bank to-day, some which were intended having been checked by the alteration in the rate of discount.

The discount houses have increased their rate of allowance to 8 per cent, for money at call, and 8¼ for deposits with short notice, being an advance of 1 per cent. The National Discount Company have notified that their terms are, respectively, 8¼ and 8½ per cent. The rate of the joint-stock banks for deposits will be 8 per cent. It was not expected that so large an increase would have been adopted, and in several quarters there was a strong indisposition to accede to it.

From the London Times (City article) Nov. 7.

The funds have been fairly maintained to-day. They opened with a very unsettled appearance at a decline of ⅛ per cent., but there was ultimately a recovery; and, although after regular hours a reaction from the highest price again took place, the market presented no appearance of general weakness. The first quotation of Consols for money was 87⅞ to 88, the two days' later news from New-York by the Vanderbilt having created a feeling of discouragement, but the public made investments, and a rally soon occurred to 88⅞. They then went to 88, from which they once more recovered to 88⅞ to ½, remaining at that point up to the official close. Subsequently it became known that the Bank returns would exhibit a reduction of £1,330,525 in the notes unemployed, and of £872,014 in the bullion, and a tendency to heaviness was again manifested, some transactions being effected at 88⅞ to ¼ for money, and 88⅞ to ⅛, for the 7th of December. The recent sales of stock by the Bank have nearly equalized the rates in the Stock Exchange and discount market, and 8½ per cent. was offered to-day for advances on Consols from account to account. Bank Stock left off at 209@211; Reduced, 87½ to ⅞; New Three per Cents, 8⅛ to ¾; and India Stock, 210@213. The increased value of money has considerably affected the market for the unfunded securities, and India Bonds were quoted 50s.@40s. discount; while Exchequer-bills declined on sales to 25s.@15s. discount.

The applications for discount at the Bank of England, to-day, were numerous, but no difficulties transpired in London.

In the foreign exchanges, this afternoon, there was a general advance, the principal rise being in the rates on Amsterdam and Hamburg.

The corn market was steady, this morning, at the rates of Monday.

The report of the Liverpool cotton market for the week shows a limited and difficult business, at a further fall of ⅛d. per lb.

About £14,000 in bar gold was withdrawn from the Bank to-day. 35,000 sovereigns were, also, taken for exportation to Lisbon, where the exchanges have been unfavorably affected by the interruption to business caused by the recent fever.

It is stated that a deputation of Glasgow merchants and mill-owners is about to proceed to London, to ask the Government for measures of financial relief. If they are able to define what they wish to be adopted, and it should appear consistent with any principles of public honesty, there can be no doubt that it will receive full attention. The difficulty is to conjecture the probable nature of the demand. It cannot be for a reduction in the rate of discount, since, while the rate is 9 or 9½ per cent. in Hamburg, 12 per cent. in Vienna, and 36 per cent. in New-York, no one would suggest that the Bank of England should lend at a lower rate than 9, unless they wished to see every ounce of gold drained from the country, and a national bankruptcy as the consequence. Neither can they contemplate requesting that the Bank should discount more liberally. Not a single sound bill has yet been rejected by the Bank, nor is there any probability that such will be the case. Such an application would therefore simply be a request in another form that they should be compelled to discount unsound bills. Neither can it be for any enlargement of the circulation by means of an issue of one-pound notes, or any similar device, on the plea that the existng amount is not sufficient for the commercial wants of the country. Trade has undergone contraction in all directions, and there has been an enormous fall in prices, yet the aggregate of notes shown by the Gazette return of this evening to be in the hands of the public is nearly a million in excess of the total in use in June, 1856, when the rate of discount was only 4½, and the increasing magnitude of our transactions was a daily subject of surprise. None of these grounds being available, it is to be presumed the deputation will simply solicit the Government to promise that the Bank shall not be allowed on any sudden occasion to destroy the commercial community by refusing accommodation at any price. If this should be the case, as there is not and never has been the remotest danger of such an event, the Chancellor of the Exchequer can have no difficulty in giving the required assurance. Whatever may be the views of the deputation, it is above all things essential they should be prepared to state them specifically. This is a duty they owe to their fellow-traders. The present is not a time for any body of men inconsiderately to create alarm by a vague clamor for impossible aid, and thus, by complicating the existing distress, to paralyze those who can be saved only by the exercise of mutual confidence and self-possession. We have been exposed to difficulties more sudden and extensive than any nation was ever before called to sustain, and the way in which they have been met must be a marvel to the whole world. There must have been a cause for this result, and it will be found in our currency system. It therefore behoves all to beware how, by endeavoring to weaken the public faith in the working of that system, they may change our calm and dignified course into one of imbecile confusion.

The market for silver is flat, and it seems that the disposition to send gold for purchases on the continent has greatly subsided.

London (Nov. 6) Correspondence of the Manchester Guardian.

The advance in the Bank rate of discount yesterday, necessarily claimed some attention in mercantile circles to-day; but its interest is secondary to the American advices, which are in the present instance more unfavorable than before, and tend to diminish the hope of matters righting themselves so speedily as was expected. The state of the produce markets is, at the same time, very unsatisfactory, yesterday's fall in prices being from 10 to 15 per cent. in several articles, making the total decline within the last two months considerable. Notwithstanding all these considerations, and the probability of the Bank returns proving unfavorable, there is no want of confidence in the general soundness and stability of trade; and thus, notwithstanding our difficulties, it is considered that, with proper prudence and forbearance, they will finally be overcome. As the advance in the Bank rate is to stop the drain upon this country for gold, and it suffices to effect that object, it is manifest that it is made not with any view of arresting unsound trade, but for a temporary purpose and its duration cannot be long maintained. Money is extraordinarily abundant, and therefore, while accommodation is afforded to the extent required, the real fact is clearly arrived at, that the whole question now agitating the public mind, is only a matter of two or three per cent. for a brief period. As regards the houses connected with the American trade, they, it is true, have to contend with the suspension of remittances, an interruption to their business which necessarily places impediments in their way, but are not generally insurmountable. The supply of capital now in the market is unusually large, and, as business is contracted, must soon bear a still greater disproportion, as compared with the demand. It denotes the real soundness of trade, and the stability of credit, that so few commercial failures have taken place; nor must it be forgotten that the current change for discount is not a rise from 2 to 9, but from, say 6 to 9 per cent.; its value for some few years past having been greater than in former periods, and its character thereby altered to a more permanently higher charge than in former years.

Much of the present demand for money, it must further be observed, is not on account of actual wants, but arises from the simple desire to obtain it on easier terms than when it may be wanted; a course of proceeding which necessarily tends to raise the rate against themselves, and thus produce the effect which they apprehend.

One very important fact, which ought not to be overlooked at the present moment, is that there is no competition between merchants and speculators for a supply of money, the quantity now on the Stock Exchange being exceedingly heavy, which is freely lent at 3 to 4 per cent. on stock. There is, then, no clashing of interests, and any one in want of money, possessing security in the shape of consols, or any of the other English stocks, funded or unfunded, can obtain it on terms less than one half that charged in the discount market. We know of one mercantile house which possessing half a million of Consols, has pledged the whole in the Stock Exchange, at from 5 down to 4 per cent. They are there placed independent of the charge of 9 per cent. in the commercial market. The loan is renewed from account to account. The jobbers have been only too happpy to recover this supply of stock.

From the London News.

The question now arises, will 9 per cent. stop the drain upon the Bank? Under the circumstances, we do not believe that the new restriction will do more than check it. Until the exchange between England and America experiences an important advance, gold will inevitably flow thither. At the same time we are under the necessity of remitting to the Continent considerable quantities of gold in payment for silver drawn thence for shipment to the East, the drain being at present aggravated by the remittances of silver for account of the East India Company. Many persons will be disposed to hope that a fresh rise in the rate of discount will check the foreign drain upon the Bank, and give a fresh favorable impulse to the foreign exchanges, and that supplies of gold from Australia will arrive in time to mitigate the existing serious pressure. We have a misgiving that in some respects these views are over sanguine, and we cannot contemplate without great pain the severe distress which a prolongation of the crisis will occasion in all circles, even amongst houses of acknowledged solidity and caution. To our apprehension the position of the Bank of England is approximating closely to that witnessed in the Autumn of 1847. The institution retains its grasp upon a large store of gold, but the reserve of notes must be rapidly diminishing under the extreme pressure. Now, we admit that there is a considerable discrepancy between the features of the two periods; external influences, conducing to an external drain, are now a prominent cause of embarrassment. But in one important point the symptoms of the two epochs correspond closely; we notice a growing disposition on the part of the public to hasten to secure money, lest the procuring of it should hereafter be attended with increased difficulty. With every wish to deal cautiously with this very delicate branch of our subject, we cannot refrain from declaring our conviction that a continuance of this pressure will demand the intervention of Government. The Bank Act is again upon its trial, and its justification may upon this occasion, as in 1847, require all the eloquence of its advocates. Should that Act be now found to stand in the way, and stop the flow of the life-blood of commerce, its provisions must be suspended, as they were ten years ago. The commercial community will cheerfully pay eight, nine, or ten per cent. for money until the pressure subsides, let them but be assured that the needful supply will be forthcoming at even those high rates upon good securities. We commend this matter to the earnest consideration of Government. It is their duty to watch the progress of affairs most closely, and if they postpone action until the cry of distress becomes as intense as in 1847, they will be called to a strict account. We are no alarmists—we have confidence in the caution and energy of our countrymen, and in the general soundness of our commercial position, but the pressure may become too severe to accord with the maintenance of the Bank Charter Act in its integrity. It will be said, perhaps, that the relaxation of the act would accelerate the efflux of bullion. We do not believe that the result would be so; but if nine and ten per cent. rates of discount prove insufficient to keep the bullion here, we would say, let it go. And we firmly believe that an immediate intimation from Government to the effect that, should necessity arise, they will be prepared to authorize the Bank to extend its issues, if even in contravention of the law, would go far towards reassuring the public mind, and preventing an extension of the area of embarrassment.

BANK OF ENGLAND RETURNS.

The return from the Bank of England for the week ending the 31st October, gives the following results when compared with the previous week:

Public Deposits	£5,160,918 Increase	£209,178
Other Deposits	11,489,979 Increase	225,993
Rest	3,270,241 Increase	30,742
On the other side of the account:
Gov't Securities	£10,254,541 the same as before.
Other Securities	22,197,320 Increase	£1,792,723
Notes unemployed	2,258,275 Decrease	1,227,555

The amount of notes in circulation is £20,371,970, being an increase of £605,705; and the stock of bullion in both departments is £8,731,553, showing a decrease of £638,241 when compared with the previous return.

In addition to the above the Gazette also contains a Bank return to the 4th of November, being the first published under the new plan for giving the Bank returns to the Wednesday instead of to the previous Saturday. The comparison of the two statements gives the following results:

Public Deposits	£4,871,944 Decrease	£288,974
Other Deposits	11,910,670 Increase	340,691
Rest	3,305,579 Increase	35,338
On the other side of the account:
Gov't Securities	£10,120,104 Decrease	£134,437
Other Securities	22,628,251 Increase	430,931
Notes unemployed	2,155,315 Decrease	102,960

The amount of notes in circulation is £20,266,745, being a decrease of £105,255; and the stock of bullion in both departments is £8,497,780, showing a decrease of £233.773 when compared with the preceding return of the 31st of October. The total decrease in the bullion since the return of the 24th October when compared with the return of the 4th of November is therefore £872,014.

On comparing this last return with the lowest period in the year 1847 it appears that the present reserve of notes is £978,575; and the present stock of bullion is £185,089 greater than their respective amounts at that time.

BUSINESS IN LIVERPOOL.

From the Liverpool Post, Nov. 7.

Another failure is reported—that of a large shipping house, chiefly concerned in the timber trade. There was a very limited demand for Cotton yesterday, with an irregular and depressed market, the sales being under 1,000 bales. The Borough Bank was visited by large numbers of depositors, and, with a view to prevent any fraudulent claims, detective officers were in attendance. Business generally on 'Change was yesterday very dull. It is stated that the dock trustees have raised a large sum (£50,000) upon dock bonds, at five per cent. The creditors of Messrs. CLAYTON & M'KEVERIGAN held a meeting on Thursday, at which a statement of assets and liabilities was submitted. It appears that, while the former do not much exceed £5,000. the latter amount to £21,000. This statement, however, does not include the premises at Birkenhead, used by Messrs. CLAYTON for their extensive operations in connection with the building and repairing of shipping. We understand there are some difficulties with respect to the adjustment of the lease of these premises. The creditors are to meet again on the 16th, by which time it is hoped that the firm, with the assistance of friends, will be able to make some arrangement with those to whom they are indebted.

SUSPENSION OF MORE HOUSES IN THE AMERICAN TRADE.

From the Sheffield Correspondent of the Manchester Guardian.

The intelligence of the suspension of Messrs. NAYLOR, VICKERS & Co. came like a thunderclap on the town. Messrs. NAYLOR, VICKERS & Co. have long been known as one of the wealthiest and most successful firms in Sheffield. To their old trade of steel converters, file manufacturers, rollers of steel, &c., they have recently added the dealing in British iron, and the importation of foreign iron on a large scale. The great extent of their business in this country, and especially in America, has enabled them to secure the contracts with the Swedish iron producers for the best marks, and they have carried on a profitable trade.

The united liabilities of the firm at all their places of business in Sheffield, Liverpool, New-York, Boston and Stockholm are under £450,000, and its assets are returned at £690,000, showing a surplus of £240,000, besides the private property of the partners. These assets consist chiefly of iron, of the best marks, of steel and other metals, of first-class bills, and of real property. There are in bills £400,000; in metals, nearly £200,000; the premises and plant of the firm in Sheffield have been valued in their stock-taking at £35,000, though they are really worth from £20,000 to £25,000 more. In this estimate the iron has been valued at ten per cent. below its cost price. The cause of suspension is, as stated in the circular, the entire derangement of mercantile affairs in America. The house has large assets there, both in commercial bills and in stock, but the state of affairs are such that the bills are not paid, the first houses in New-York and Boston requiring a renewal of their paper. Since the crisis began, Messrs. NAYLOR, VICKERS & Co. have sold in America only for cash; but the result has been greatly to contract their transactions. Instead of receiving £50,000 or £60,000 monthly from America, they have been under the necessity of sending funds out to their houses there to sustain solvent customers. What NAYLOR, VICKERS & Co. have suffered from has been an entire stoppage of their ordinary returns beyond the Atlantic. Their bad debts are of small amount, not exceeding, so far as known by the last mail, £3,000; and it is confidently stated that even if all their American debts should prove bad, the resources of the house are still sufficient to pay every person what they owe. If there had been a reasonable prospect that the American crisis would pass over in a month or two, no doubt Messrs. NAYLOR, VICKERS & Co. would have found means to continue their payments.

From the London Times.

It transpired late this afternoon that the acceptances of the firm of POWLES, BROTHERS & Co. to foreign draughts had been dishonored. The cause of the embarrassment is stated to be disappointment in the receipt of remittances from South America. The acceptances of the house are about £50,000. The firm of POWLES, PRICE & Co., in which Mr. POWLES is also a partner, and which is engaged exclusively in the insurance business, is not affected by this event.

Liverpool letters state the suspension of Messrs. W. ORR & Co., in the River Plate trade. The liabilities are not supposed to be very heavy.

GREAT PRESSURE ON THE IRISH BANKS.

Dublin (Nov. 5) Correspondence of the Manchester Guardian.

The intelligence of the advance of discount by the Bank of England, from eight to nine per cent., created extraordinary sensation here, and considerable surprise and disappointment among many of the commercial class. The news did not reach the Bank of Ireland until after the meeting of the Directors had terminated, and, in consequence, no step will be taken until to-morrow, when the rate for British and Irish bills will be advanced to nine per cent. The other Dublin banks await the action of the Bank of Ireland. I have often recently mentioned that trade was remarkably sound, and credit exceedingly well maintained in this city; but it is now impossible to say how far the enhanced rates for money may press down even solvent traders. The banks here have acted, up to this time, with great liberality and prudence; but circumstances will force them to be very circumspect in their transactions.

From the Belfast Mercury.

As far as Belfast is concerned our merchants and manufacturers appear up to the present to have been only slightly involved in the effect of the crisis, which is producing such wide-spread dismay in other localities. Yesterday was settling-day, and we have full assurance for the statement that for the past six months there has not been a "4th" which passed off more satisfactorily. The "run" on the banks has ceased in Belfast, and confidence appears to have been completely restored, even among the farming classes, who were the principal parties to entertain apprehension. We regret to say, however, that a County Down firm connected with our staple trade is announced to have suspended payment. The liabilities are to the amount of £22,000 and the assets are said to be likely to turn out amply sufficient, if they could be obtained, for their realization. A small house in Belfast is also reported as having succumbed to the pressure, but it is so trifling, only to the amount of £1,300, that it has received very little attention.

THE PARIS BOURSE AND THE CRISIS IN FRANCE.

Paris (Nov. 6) Correspondence of the London News.

The news brought by telegraph, that the Bank of England has raised its discount to 9 ₱ cent., being quite expected, did not produce any great effect on the Bourse. It is taken for granted that the Bank of France, pursuing the system it has adopted, of keeping its discount within ½ ₱ cent. of the London rate, will at once augment its charge to 8½ ₱ cent. Up to a late hour this evening the Directors had not met, but there can be little doubt that they will make the change tomorrow. The state of the Bank has slightly improved. It is understood that the bullion, which had fallen to 190,000,000 three days ago, has now increased to 198,000,000.

From the Paris Correspondent of the London Times.

The French houses in commercial relations with the United States watch with intense anxiety the ccurse of the financial crisis in that country. They are aware of the difficulties they will have to encounter; they dispatched goods for which they themselves have entered into engagements in the full confidence of returns which cannot be realised so long as the American banks do not resume their payments in cash. Yet, if we are to believe what we are told, the effect will not be so severe on the French trade as is supposed. The majority of the houses that will lose by the American failures are wealthy, and in a position to meet the crisis. Some have already taken precautions against loss, and also to secure the payment of their advances. They have sent orders to their agents in the United States to accept payment in paper, and to lay it out in the purchase of corn, cotton, and sugar, for which a ready demand will be found in the markets of Europe.

A DARK VIEW OF THE CRISIS.

From the Liverpool Post.

A well-informed correspondent writes to us as follows: "The pressure is now being transferred from the manufacturers to the laboring population, and unless measures of relief are applied, thousands of artisans in Scotland will be thrown destitute on the country. The Bank of England Directors can only comply with the provisions of their Charter, with money at 9 and 10 per cent. Cotton, that was at 9½d., must come down to 5½d., and at this price manufacturers would be enabled to go on with safety. As for the United States, four-fifths of the Banks and merchants are insolvent; and value of the cotton crop will, therefore, be reduced as assets one-half. Wheat and flour have already come down 50 per cent. in the Western States, and these prices must be expected to govern future maximum operations. The struggle, in the meantime, is between money and produce, the importer and manufacturer, the exporter and the foreign consumer; for one thing is clear—this country cannot continue to pay for India and China produce in specie, as hitherto; nor can America expect any longer to tamper with the markets of all the world with her spurious credits. In Canada the Banks are confident of maintaining specie payments, unless some unexpected complication should supervene, which was not anticipated. Should this attitude be upheld, the produce of the West would be moved to the seaboard during the Winter, by railway to Portland, through Canadian agency and monetary facilities."

WHERE IS THE MONEY GONE TO?

From the London Times, Nov. 5.

The commercial panic across the Atlantic is beginning to lead to a very rigid economic inquiry. The money is gone, and who has spent it all? That is the question. We need not add that the question is asked with considerable irritation and sharpness of tone, sufficient to account for any amount of reluctance in the culprit to come forward and confess. Who has spent all the money? The Hue and Cry of New-York offers an almost unlimited reward for his or her apprehension. Whoever discovers the criminal will receive not only a pension of several thousand dollars for life, but also a civic crown; he will be clothed in splendid apparel, and led on horseback through the streets of the City. All New-York is at present busy in searching for the gigantic spendthrift. Where has he gone? What has become of him? Who saw him last? What train did he leave by? Has he fled to the Dismal Swamp, or to California, or to Nicaragua? Is he still in the City, evading pursuit? Everybody is looking into cupboards, behind doors, under beds, and in all holes and corners of upper and lower stories, to see if he is there.

When a man becomes a bankrupt, and cannot find out who is to blame for it; when he has decided that, of course, he himself has had nothing to do with it; that none of his clerks are in fault, or the Post-Office, or the Government, or the Custom-House,—in lack of every other cause of the smash, he turns round upon his wife: "Yes; now, I have got it. I always thought it would come to this. Now I see the consequence of marrying an expensive woman." This our cotemporary, the NEW-YORK TIMES, tells us, is now the general explanation given at New-York of the recent convulsion of the money-market. Women are the burden of conversation, and the whole community is agreed that it has married a most expensive wife. All New-York merchants are turning round fiercely upon their domestic partners; the extravagant wives have done it all—it is the French silks, the crinoline and moire, the gloves and feathers, fans and furbelows, that have ruined them; these have taken the money out of the country. The whole City, says our cotemporary, if full of "misogynist declamation." "From the extreme of obsequious gallantry we are passed to the opposite excess of vituperative injustice. We are treating them, in fact, very much as the African savage treats his fetish. In the times of our prosperity we could not sufficiently adulate those lovely omnipotent beings. But the pretty creatures of yesterday are the extravagant sirens of to-day." Severe sumptuary laws are almost meditated—enactments against dress, ornament, lace, jewelry, &c. The American merchant's wife must return to rigid Republican simplicity. One would imagine there was a Jonah preaching repentance, and that the great American Tyre was going literally to clothe herself with sackcloth. There will be allowed Quaker bonnets alone gowns of the plainest drab stuff, shawls of the same: those wives of the most opulent citizens who are permitted to use silk, will have it measured out to them by the Mayor and Corporation. The Legislative Assembly of the State will debate in the next session upon the subject of female dress, and, as soon as a committee has sat, examined witnesses, and made a report on the annual quantity of clothing and ornament which the commercial welfare of the community can spare the ladies, will proceed to lay down permanent restrictions, which will be a model of sumptuary wisdom, and supply an example for the legislation of other countries that may find themselves falling into mercantile confusion.

Such is the repentance, not of Nineveh, but of New-York, and certainly it is an instance of the same sword that wounded healing. Money is the corrupter, and bankruptcy is the converter. New-York now finds that it has gone astray—that it has departed from the original simplicity of the Puritan founders, and it is anxious to return to drab again, in order that it may get rich again. This motive to national penitence would not, indeed, have satisfied the Prophets, and the penance itself appears rather too vicarious a one. The American tradesman repents by deputy in the person of his wife, who, to atone for the luxury and extravagance of the community, is to wear drab. This is rather too much after the model of that mediæval fasting which the landlord performed by the instrumentality of his serfs, and by the Royal rule of chastisement which bound BUCHANAN, the precepter of the youthful JAMES I., whenever the young Prince did anything wrong, to flog his companion for it. American gallantry will, doubtless, assert that the gentlemen, after all, will be most severely punished by this severity to the ladies, and they will feel the reduction of female costume most acutely. But if the gentleman retains all his peculiar luxuries, and only economizes in the dress of his wife and daughters, we shall think that he has a power of consoling himself for the loss of gay colors. But, though the repentance of New-York is not a very afflictive one, and though its motive will not bear accurate examination, the very pause to reflect and examine is something. Things are come to a standstill, and there is a general idea that "we have been going too far," and that "we must retrench." The pause is only a short interval in the rush of commerce and adventure, but it is still for the time a sort of repentance—a commercial communing with itself—though the fit of penitence will pass off, the rush commence again, and America go on getting, spending and pausing, and then getting again, to the end of the chapter.

Our New-York cotemporary, however, takes up this question in a gallant rather than a commercial spirit. He does not see why the ladies alone should be blamed for the failure of the New-York Banks, and why they should be the only victims of retrenchment. He enters into a very accurate calculation on the subject of silks, furs, and foreign articles of wear, and shows that the ladies have not been at all extravagant:

"Let us see how the matter stands. For the year 1855-56 the importations of silk goods into this country amounted to $25,000,651—truly a 'parlous' sum, and a tremendously effective figure of speech for a lecture on the ladies."

But he is not overwhelmed by this figure, but proceeds to examine it. He discovers:

"That out of these millions of dollars' worth of silk, there are certain 'masculinities' to be deducted—viz.: the sleeve and skirt linings of some 4,000,000 of male coats, and the cravats and waistcoats of silk that the American men from Maine to California contrive in a twelvemonth to consume, besides mystical ribbons and aprons belonging to orders and lodges, silken cushions, curtains, &c."

The deductions leave in his estimate only $23,000,000 to be charged to the ladies. Is this sum, then, an extravagant one? He decides not. At an average of $2 per yard, this sum would represent 11,500,000 yards of silk, which, "as a reasonable young lady assures him," would only supply 1,000,000 silk dresses. Now, then, having got the annual number of dresses, we come to the number of the wearers. The United States contain nearly 3,500,000 houses, 1,500,000 of which he considers to represent each an average income of $1,000 a year—i. e. an income which justifies silk. So these 1,500,000 families only wear 1,000,000 silk dresses, which is only one silk dress per annum for the whole family, and only that for two-thirds of them.

Our cotemporary is equally accurate and equally triumphant in his calculation about fur, thread, lace, the belt of northern Free States. European emigrants flock as naturally towards Illinois and Iowa as the native-born lad from New-England. To check or control this movement merely by the promptings of political ambition is impossible, and the world may rejoice that it is so. We, in England, with a long experience of tropical possessions, have felt from the first that the scheme for converting into American States the neck of land which joins the two Continents could have no root in any real national instinct.

While, however, by the nature of things Central America must be left in the hands of its present possessers, yet England and the United States must always have the deepest interest in the tranquility of the country. That Honduras, or Nicaragua, or Costa Rica can ever occupy a high position in the world as States no one can believe. But they may yet be peaceable, prosperous, and respected. The Spaniards have adapted themselves to the country better than we ever should be likely to do, and they have not that antipathy to amalgamation with the Indian and African races which marks the Anglo-Saxon. They are certainly the fittest people to inhabit the country; at any rate, they are there, and we must make use of them. So to settle the Central American question must be our first object. The long disputes between the Union and this country are, perhaps, better understood by diplomatists than by the public. In America they have, no doubt, been followed with interest by the readers of newspapers, but we Englishmen, amid the multiplicity of our relations and the never-ceasing succession of great questions, have paid but little attention to a region which we generally associate only with mahogany, rattlesnakes, and yellow fever. However, the question is really important, simply because it has been made so by politicians. The aggressive designs of this "grasping monarchy" on Central America were, we will venture to say, the topic of some fifty thousand orations last 4th of July. We cannot but rejoice, then, that our Government has determined to settle the matter, so far as lies in its power. Sir WILLIAM GORE OUSELEY has been dispatched to the United States, and will, it is said, be met in an amicable spirit by the American Cabinet. The chief object of discussion will, of course, be the construction to be placed on the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty. It is well known that a party in the United States has seen with anger the Government at Washington bind itself never to occupy the Central American territory. Happily it is, we believe, only a party, and the great body of the public will be contented with a treaty establishing the neutrality of regions which as a possession can be useful to no one, but a free passage through which is necessary for the security of the world's commerce. The complaint that England still retains some rights on this coast is evidently frivolous. England has nothing but the little settlements which date back so many years, and which she has bound herself not to extend. The question has, no doubt, been complicated by the filibustering expeditions, which have excited the American mind, and made it unwilling to consent to anything which seemed likely to check the occupation and conquest of the country. However, as this excitement has now pretty well passed away, the sensible and equitable stipulations of the treaty are likely to be better appreciated. We sincerely trust that the two Governments will settle this matter speedily and permanently. The quarrels between these little Spanish States, their petty wars, their social disorganization, and now General WALKER's buccaneering, have delayed for years the great work which alone can give a value to this part of the world. A canal joining the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans is every day becoming more and more a necessity. The Americans can hardly reconcile themselves to the notion that the route from New-York to San Francisco is always to be round Cape Horn; nor can we help seeing that the nearest way to our Australian Colonies is across the Gulf of Mexico. It seems now high time to think about this great work, which we believe was once proposed by the United States Government and cordially approved by our own. But, whether the canal is to be in Nicaragua or at Panama, it is necessary that the whole region should be tranquillized, which can never be done as long as the bickerings between America and England allow sanguinary factions to be continually "pronouncing" in each unfortunate Republic.

Banquet on Board the British Flag-Ship Impregnable to the American Officers.

From the Plymouth Mail, Nov. 5.

On Saturday last a farewell banquet was given to Captain HUDSON and the officers of the United States steam frigate Niagara, by Captain HOUSTON STEWART, C. B., and the officers of the flag-ship Impregnable, as a token of respect for the courtesy and gentlemanly bearing which has been exhibited by the former during their stay in this port, and as an interchange of good fellowship between the gallant representatives of the naval service of the two nations. In order to show due honor to the guests, and to give more than an ordinary interest to the occasion, the fine old ship was gaily decorated. The starboard accommodation-ladder was covered with flags, and the rail with laurels, while over the entrance port a device was erected of the British Crown, underneath which was the word "Welcome," both being lighted up with variegated lamps. Among the visitors from the Niagara were Captain HUDSON, Commander PENNOCK, Lieutenants GUEST, WHITING, MACAULY, BOYD, (Marines,) Drs. LYNCH and WASHINGTON, and Purser ELDRIDGE; from the Agamemnon were Master-Commander NODDALL, Mr. HILLIARD, Lieutenant GRAHAM, R. M., Dr. KERR, and Mr. ROLSTONE. The whole party accompanied Captain STEWART from the quarter-deck to the elegantly furnished chief cabin, the tasteful arrangements of which gave the most unmistakable evidence of the handiwork of the fairer sex. Very shortly afterwards the band played "The Roast Beef of Old England," which called the officers into the fore cabin, in which the dinner was served. The table was laid out with admirable taste. Captain STEWART took his seat in the centre on one side, having Captain HUDSON on his right and Sir BARRINGTON REYNOLDS on his left, while Commander PALMER faced him, with the Commander of the Niagara on his right, and the second lieutenant of the Niagara on his left. Among the decorations of the cabin was a fine plate of her Majesty hanging in front of the centre of the royal standard of England, and on the opposite bulkhead was a plate of General WASHINGTON suspended against the American flag.

After the removal of the cloth,

Captain STEWART, in rising to propose the health of Her Majesty, said it was quite as much a matter of attachment and good feeling as custom with the English people to drink to their Queen, so great was the loyalty awakened by the many virtues which adorned her character.

The toast was drank upstanding and with cheers.

Captain STEWART again arose, and said he could have wished the proposal of "The Health of the President of the United States" had fallen into abler hands than his, though it afforded him much pleasure to introduce the toast. The President of the United States held a high position among the potentates of the world. Called on to preside over the destinies of a mighty nation, he was freely elected by the people, and when placed at the head of the nation he stepped from the ranks of the people. [Cheers.] The warmest interest in the prosperity of America was, and must ever be, felt by the people of England, and though divided by the great Atlantic Ocean, and distant 3,000 miles, it was determined that space should be bridged ever; and in the attempt to carry out that line of closer connection both nations had cordially joined their efforts. The great aim and object of both countries were in many respects the same—each striving for the promotion of the interests of peace, of commerce and of science—of civilization and the extension of the Christian religion. [Hear, hear and cheers.] The English people could not fail to remember that the Americans were the direct descendants of England, and that they were, therefore, really brethren. There was something beautifully touching to the feelings of the English people when they considered that the youngest children in America were first taught to speak in the same language as their own. As brethren they must be for ever, and the union between England and America, in peaceful relation to each other, it was most devoutly to be hoped would never be broken by any circumstances which the progress of Time's iron hand might bring about.

Drunk with loud cheers. Band—"Hail Columbia."

Captain STEWART said the toast he should next propose was one which no party would neglect to drink, and which would always be secure of a most cordial reception. In proposing the toast of the army and navy of the United States he was certain it would be received by his brother officers in the English service with pleasure and characteristic warmth. It had been his fortune to serve with both the American forces, and he had great pleasure in being able to speak of their professional excellence, a knowledge which also made him the more anxious that the English nation should respect the forces of the Great Republic. [Cheers and laughter.] He had great pleasure in seeing an American ship-of-war here, on such a friendly mission as that which had brought them, and he would be very happy to speak to them by the electric telegraph, but he hoped they would never speak to each other with cannon balls. [Cheers and laughter.] He hoped and believed, however, that the two nations knew and understood that their separate and combined interests lay in their union being drawn closer together than ever it had yet been. "The Army and Navy of the United States."

Band—"A Life on the Ocean Wave" and the "White Cockade."

The toast was drunk with cheers.

Capt. HUDSON, in acknowledging, on behalf of the American navy, the compliment which had just been paid to that service, said he had not the eloquence of Capt. STEWART, but he thanked them very heartily for the kind manner in which the toast had been proposed and received. He quite agreed with what the gallant captain had said respecting America and England, and he hoped that peace and unity would always continue between them, for he fully believed that war would prove a sad misfortune to both. They were the only two nations in existence which were perfectly independent of each other, and yet owed a common origin. It was true the Old Country sometimes did not approve of the steps of the New, and remonstrated warmly, and if America went fillibustering England would speak up very sharply. [Cheers and laughter.] Looking, however, to the unity of interests of the two countries, he hoped the time would come when they would go forth together shoulder to shoulder. He liked Mr. BUCHANAN, the President, and as for the Queen of England, he had never heard a word said of her but what was in her praise. She was, as Capt. STEWART had said, a good mother, and in every respect a noble example to the women of England and of every other country. He held her to be the best and dearest Sovereign in the world, and if she could be persuaded to go over and visit the United States, he believed they would pay more attention to her, show more respect, and more real attachment to her person, than any nation in the world—almost more than the English people themselves. [Cheers and laughter.] Capt. HUDSON then observed in a jocular style that America intended to do away with all diplomacy and carry out her policy with other nations in a more straightforward manner. He believed Mr. BUCHANAN would make a very excellent President of the Republic, and he was satisfied he had a very favorable feeling towards this country. [Cheers.]

Lieutenant BOYD, of the United States Marines, acknowledged the toast on the part of the American army. Although he said he did not directly belong to that branch of the service, it was the second time he had been in England that he had been called upon to respond to that toast. It might be presumption in him to do so, but he could say that the American army had always done its duty in whatever way it had been required by its country, and had fought its battles victoriously. If it was asked from whence they received their first knowledge of the science of war it was from the English soldier. They had been placed in circumstances very similar. The American army in Mexico had not only contended against greatly superior numbers, but, like the English army in the East, had to endure a pestilential climate and privations that tested the moral as well as the physical courage of the soldier; and meeting the enemy in his stronghold—the very capital of his empire—they fled before the American steel, thus proving the indomitable courage and perseverance which his countrymen imbibed from their noble ancestors. After expatiating at some length upon the deeds performed by the respective armies of England and America, he said he would conclude by offering the following sentiment; "May the God of battles, the protector of women and the helpless child, so direct the gallant band who are now serving their Queen and country so nobly in the East, and enable them to inflict the just vengeance upon the barbarians which they so richly deserve, that they may hereafter never attempt to war against the Christian, or massacre helpless women and children." Lieutenant BOYD took his seat amidst tremendous cheering.

Various other toasts were given, after which the gallant party adjourned to the wardroom for the enjoyment of the Virginian weed, and Lieutenant GUEST, of the Niagara, made a most able and brilliant speech in acknowledgment of the courteous and friendly attention which the American officers had received from their professional brethren in the English service.

Vice-Admiral Sir BARRINGTON REYNOLDS left the ship at 10½ o'clock, and as he went over the side was saluted by the discharge of a volley of rockets. Captain HUDSON and the officers of the Niagara remained on board in the enjoyment of the hospitality of the officers of the Impregnable until the "small hours" closely approached, and on leaving they gave three cheers, which were as heartily returned from the deck of the flag ship.

The Leviathan Steamship.

CAUSE OF THE RECENT FAILURE TO LAUNCH HER—ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE EVENT IN DECEMBER.

From the London Times.

After it was determined to cease all further efforts to effect the launch on Tuesday, the workmen were employed throughout the night in taking proper precautions to secure the vessel in the position in which she at present rests. For this purpose powerful timber shores were fixed under her stem and stern beyond where the cradles support her, and the massive check-tackle which secures her on the side towards the land has also been hauled taut, so that, as far as human ingenuity can forsee, there is no mechanical possibility of her now slipping and launching herself without notice.

As might have been anticipated, the most vague and contradictory rumors are afloat as to the cause which led to Tuesday's failure. Only two of these are sufficiently probable to demand notice. The first states that in consequence of the immense pressure and friction the iron transverse bars which cross the bottom of the cradles have cut into the railway metals, and so fixed the whole that it would be immovable unless the entire vessel can be raised up from the launching ways and started afresh. For this report we are glad to say the result of a close inspection of the bars leaves no foundation. In fact, the friction, considering the amount of pressure on the cradles and bars, seems to have been marvelously slight. The second report avers most positively that the launching ways themselves have settled down under the weight of the ship's stern and fixed it as it were in a hole. This also is incorrect, for the ways remain as firm and rigid as on the first day of their construction, and up to the present they have received no cause to be otherwise, since the vessel is still in its original foundations. But the ways have been so constructed as to allow for a sinking.

Each "way" of 120 feet wide is formed by three spans of 40 feet each—the spans resting each upon rows of piles, and rising in the centre 1½ inches, so that a considerable depression is provided against. The real cause of the failure on Tuesday was the accident which took place at the windlass, and which made the whole mass of workmen so timid and suspicious that it was actually unsafe to intrust them with the execution of details which preeminently demanded coolness and judgment. From the same timidity, also, and from prudential motives, it was considered better after the accident to remove the men from the barges which were moored in the river, and worked the hauling tackle upon the midships of the vessel. These four barges were capable of applying a downward strain on the Leviathan of 250 tons, which strain was chiefly depended upon to move her in the case of the hitch which did take place. When the second attempt was made without the aid of these barges an undue strain came upon the chains which, fastened at the bow and stern, pulled towards the river, and at last the former broke. This, coupled with the accident to the pin of the hydraulic press, stopped the launch. The Leviathan at present rests exactly six inches lower than formerly, and, taking the mean of her progress fore and aft, about four feet down the launching ways. According to the incline of these ways, the actual lowering of the vessel since she moved is only four inches, but when the cradles were fixed under her and the last supports removed, she settled down two inches in the cradles themselves. From the levels taken it appears that the deflection in the whole length of the ship since she was left to support herself in the two cradles, is so slight as to be almost imperceptible. From the forward cradle to the bows the deflection is some fractional part of an inch; between the two cradles amidships none whatever is perceptible; and from the aftermost cradle to the sternpost, where more than 200 feet of the heaviest parts of the vessel hang entirely without support from the ground, the deflection is only half an inch. From the deck the entire deflection from stem to stern, nearly 700 feet, is only one inch. We believe that the arrangements for finally launching the colossal structure on the 2d December will not differ in any essential particular from the method pursued on Tuesday last, but we can speak more positively as to this in the course of another day. During yesterday Mr. BRUNEL, and the great ship's great Captain, the most indefatigable and zealous of all commanders, (Captain HARRISON,) were down at Millwall, inspecting the ship, and ascertained that she was neither strained nor twisted, even to the extent of the most fractional portion of an inch. The men injured by the accident at the windlass are all progressing slowly, though still no hope exists of the recovery of DONOVAN, and STACEY remains in a precarious state. Some idea of the frightful violence with which these poor men were struck may be formed from the fact that one of the massive bandles of the windlass, of solid iron, 1½ inches in diameter, which struck the men, is bent and twisted as if it was formed of lead.

The American Steamer Vanderbilt Aground.

From the London News, Nov. 6.

The huge steamer Vanderbilt, from the United States, was telgraphed yesterday as having passed Hurst Castle, at 9 A. M. Captain HIGGINS, her commander, was in bed, dangerously ill, and an East-end pilot was on board in command of the ship. A dense fog was on the Solent. The Vanderbilt, on passing Hurst, was on her way to Cowes Road, where she was to put out her English mails in a small tug steamer from Southampton, and then proceed to Havre. Between Cowes and Calshot Castle there is a sand-bank called the Brambles, where now and then a small craft has been lost. On the Brambles the Vanderbilt grounded. Most fortunately she was at the time going at only one-third of her speed, the tide was also flowing, and a powerful tug steamer, with steam up, happened to be close by to assist her off again. As soon as the Vanderbilt grounded, Mr. BILLINGSLEY, a gentleman from the firm of Messrs. DUNLAP & SCHOALES, the Southampton agent of the Vanderbilt line, happened to be on board the Southampton tug, which was waiting at Cowes for the English passengers of the Vanderbilt, and he immediately gave orders to go along side the large steamer, and made preparations for assisting her off. The tide had to rise six or seven feet on the Brambles, and about two hours after the steamer grounded she was afloat again, but not before she had lost an anchor and broken a chain. Had it not been for the assistance rendered by the tug, the grounded steamer would not have floated before the next tide. At 1 P. M., yesterday, the Vanderbilt left Cowes for Havre, without having received any damage beyond that just mentioned. She left New-York on the night of the 24th ult. She ought to have started in the middle of the day, but was detained on account of an accident happening to the mail steamer Atlantic, which was to leave also on the 24th ult. It was expected that the Vanderbilt would have taken the Atlantic's mails on board, but late on the day of sailing she was ordered to proceed to sea without them. It was believed that the Atlantic would be ready to leave New-York for Liverpool on the 26th ult. The Vanderbilt has experienced nothing but continuous storms and heavy gales across the Atlantic.

BARING BROTHERS & CO.

Liverpool Markets.

Per Niagara.] LIVERPOOL, Friday, Nov. 6, 1857.

COTTON—Immediately following the sailing of the Arabia, there was an improved demand for Cotton, which resulted in a partial recovery of the decline noted in the earlier part of the week, but on Monday the market became depressed, under adverse accounts to hand from America, and subsequently there has been great anxiety to sell, irrespective of demand, which has been accelerated by the increasing stringency of the money market, and the advanced rate of interest from 8 to 9 ₱ cent. The consequence is that prices are not only depressed, but so irregular, conforming to the necessities of sellers, as to render it difficult to assess any fair quotations. The small business of the past day or two seems to have been done on the basis of a decline of ⅛@⅜d. In Manchester trade has become equally dull, and prices are in the main nominal. We quote nominally: Middling Orleans, 8d.; Mobile, 7¾d.; Boweds, 7¾d. Present estimated stock, 364,000 bales, including 159,658 American, against 425,480, including 320,256 American, for corresponding week of last year. The sales for the week are 21,830 bales, and those for to-day are estimated at less than 1,000, the market being almost nominal.

TOBACCO—The stock in warehouse, on 31st October, was 16,857 hhds., (comprising 1,743 Virginia Leaf, 1,834 Virginia Stemmed, 1,582 Kentucky Leaf, 4,014 Kentucky Stemmed and 1,684 Maryland,) against 9,323 hhds. for corresponding week of last year. The sales during October were some 1,000 hhds., including 400 to the trade, 400 for Ireland, 140 for Scotland and 60 for export. The market has been quiet but steady, within the following quotations: Virginia Leaf, 7½d.@10d.@11d.; Virginia Stemmed, 11d.@14d.; Kentucky Leaf, 6d.@9½d.@12d.; Kentucky Stemmed, 10½d.@11½d.@13d.; Maryland, 6½d.@9½d.

SUGAR continues dull, the market being depressed, and prices declined fully 2s. ₱ cwt. Cuba is worth to-day 37s. 6d., duty paid; whilst Brazils have been freely offered at 22s.@23s. In Bond. In London the market is possibly worse than here, it being difficult to effect sales even at reduced quotations.

BREADSTUFFS—The week opened with large arrivals, including free receipts of Wheat and Flour from America; and on Monday there was an improved inquiry for fine qualities of Wheat and choice samples of Flour, which was continued up to Tuesday's market, when there was a good business done, at the full prices of Friday, in all useful descriptions; but low grades of Wheat were 1d.@2d. cheaper, and common Flour was difficult to place. On Wednesday there was more doing in fine Wheats, at an advance of 1d. ₱ 70 lbs. on Tuesday's price, and the trade in Flour was steady; but on Thursday the advance in the Bank rate of interest completely checked business, which has subsequently been of the most limited character. Indian Corn has been in fair inquiry for feeding purposes, although prices were only feebly supported in the early part of the week, and have subsequently receded 6d@1s. ₱ quarter on mixed and white. The farmers' deliveries for week ending Oct. 31 were 102,559 quarters, at 53s. 11d., against 104,494 quarters, at 66s., for corresponding week of last year. The imports for past week were 32,000 quarters Wheat, including 25,198 from United States; Flour, 15,927 bbls., including 14,966 from United States; and of Indian Corn, 27,745 quarters, including 7,060 from United States.

At to-day's market there was a small attendance, and the improvement of Tuesday was almost lost. Owing to the limited supply of fine Wheat holders were firm, but secondary qualities were difficult to sell, though they might have been bought 1d. to 2d. under Tuesday. Prime White Wheat sold at 8s. 4d., fair at 8s., fine Red 7s. 7½d.@7s. 8d.; Chicago offered at 7s., but not taken. Flour was 6d. to 1s. lower: choice S. F. Ohio sold at 39s.; choice W. Canal offered at 28s., with no buyers over 27s.; Baltimore, 28s. @28s. 6d. Indian Corn sold in a small way at 36s. 6d. for Mixed.

BACON—The free slaughterings in the country, with the use of substitutes, have diminished the consumption of Bacon, nevertheless there has been a fair retail trade at prices slightly favoring the buyer, although not quotably lower. We continue to quote: Short Rib, 49s.@51s.; Long Rib, 49s.@50s.; Cumberland, 45s.@48s.

BEEF AND PORK—Ordinary descriptions are unsaleable, whilst fine parcels are only occasionally taken, at irregular prices, for retail purposes—the market is altogether nominal.

LARD is nominal, there being nothing doing. The stock is some 1,200 tons.

TALLOW—In the absence of demand, prices have receded full 3s. ₱ cwt., without leading to business. The nominal quotations are 54s. for St. Petersburg, and 53s. for Butchers' Association.

In London the market has been equally depressed—the closing quotations being 53s. 6d. on the spot, and 52s. 9d. all the year.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT CALENDAR.—MONDAY, Nov. 23.

SUPREME COURT—Circuit.—Nos. 16, 20, 2091, 1410, 1621, 1981, 649, 686, 2351, 2319, 1701, 324, 1608, 1624, 346, 347, 350, 351, 354, 356.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT.

Before Hon. Justice Davies.

THE CANGEMI CASE—SENTENCE POSTPONED.

The People vs. Michael Cangemi.—Yesterday was announced as the day when sentence would be pronounced upon Michael Cangemi, convicted of the murder of policeman Anderson. Crowds of the unemployed thronged the stairways and passages of the City Hall, long before the opening of the doors. When the doors were opened, the rush and crush to obtain sitting or even standing room was so great as nearly to tear away the doors and everything which opposed it. On the opening of the Court, a very uninteresting promissory note case was taken up, which did not at all satisfy the excited appetite of the eager spectators. About 11¾ o'clock, the District-Attorney arrived, and had a private consultation with the Judge, whereupon it was announced that the sentence of Cangemi would be postponed until a week from next Monday, at 11 o'clock. The sentence then, probably, will be pronounced at the General Term, the sentence of the Court being necessary. Judge DAVIES will not be at the General Term until week after next, which probably is the reason for the long postponement.

Neither the prisoner or his counsel were present in Court.

SPECIAL TERM.—Nov. 20.

Before Hon. Justice Roosevelt.

DECISIONS.

THE BOWERY BANK INSOLVENCY TO BE INQUIRED INTO.

In re Bowery Bank.—It will be remembered that some days since Albert H. Nicolay made an application to have the matter of the alleged insolvency of the Bowery Bank referred to some person to examine into the necessity and the bona fide nature of the assignment. Yesterday Judge ROOSEVELT granted an order referring the matter to Charles Stewart to ascertain all the facts.

John W. Greaten vs. Wm. B. Morgan et al.—The affidavits are contradictory, but the weight of the evidence is in favor of the position that the defendants are non-residents, and that there was no fraud in the use of the process. The motion to discharge the attachment must therefore be denied.

Before Hon. Justice Mitchell.

Southworth et al. vs. Culver et al.—Case settled.

Shaw vs. Buckhous.—Motion to set aside judgment denied without costs.

ANOTHER HABEAS CORPUS.

In the matter of the application of John Cockburn for the recovery of Jane Cockburn.—In this case the child Jane is in the possession of its grandfather, Andrew McNaught. His father desires to obtain possession of it, but the grandfather refuses to give it up, alleging that it was bound to him by the overseers of the poor.

The moving party denied that it was in the power of the overseers of the Almshouse to bind out a minor unless with the consent of the parents, if they are alive and here. In this case the parents are living in this City, and were so at the time of the indenture. The child, however, had remained with the grandfather for some time. The father has married a second wife, and now desires the child.

The judge took the papers, and will render his decision on Saturday the 28th inst.

The Glass Ballot-Boxes—Fernando Wood's Answer.

James Horner, a citizen, &c., vs. Fernando Wood, impleaded with Samuel C. Jollie and others.—The several answer of Fernando Wood, one of the defendants in this action, to the plaintiff's complaint therein shows:

First—He admits that at the time of the passage of the act known as the act to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and for a long time thereafter, he did pronounce the said act unconstitutional. He further admits, that while he believed it so, and until it had been pronounced valid by the Court of Appeals, that he refused to act as a Commissioner under it; he also admits that on or about the 22d day of July he took his seat as a Commissioner under such law.

Second—He denies the allegation in the complaint, that by said act it was made the duty of said Board of Police to provide ballot boxes for said Metropolitan Police District, but avers that it was made the duty of said Board to provide said boxes for the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn, for use at general, special and charter elections, and to keep custody thereof, except during the taking, receiving and counting of the votes.

Third. He admits the introduction by Simeon Draper of the resolution set out in the complaint, but denies the allegation that the said Board of Police did not advertise as provided in said resolution; and on the contrary he says that said Board of Police, in pursuance of law, did advertise for proposals in three public daily newspapers of the City of New-York, viz.: The New-York Daily Tribune; the New-York TIMES, and The New-York Daily Express, each day, for the period of two weeks, as deponent is informed, commencing about the 20th of July and ending about the 1st August, and that the following is said advertisement cut from the files of said Daily Tribune:

THE BOARD OF POLICE COMMISSIONERS of the Metropolitan Police District will receive proposals for supplying the District with ballot-boxes, until the 1st day of August next. By order of the Board,

GEO. W. EMBREE, Chief Clerk, pro tem.

Fourth—Defendant admits that a contract was made by said Board with Samuel C. Jollie for the manufacture and delivery by said Jollie to and for said Board, to be used under the provisions of said Metropolitan Police bill, glass ballot-boxes.

Fifth—Defendant admits that on the 14th September last, James W. Nye, who is one of the Metropolitan Police Commissioners appointed by the Governor of the State of New-York, reported to said Board that said contract had been made with said Jollie, stating the price, and other particulars, and that said report was accepted. He also admits that on the 21st September, this deponent offered, in said Board, the resolution mentioned in the complaint, but avers that said resolution had no reference whatever to ballot-boxes or said contract with Jollie, but referred solely to rent, stationery, printing, advertising, fuel and light, which, by said Police Act, said Board had authority to provide, as Police expenses, without application to any person, Board, or officer, other than said Police Board.

Sixth—Defendant admits that Alderman Steers, at the time named in the complaint, offered the resolution set out in the complaint, and that when said resolution was presented to the defendant, as Mayor of the City of New-York, that he approved of the same.

Seventh—Defendant, on information and belief, admits the allegations in said complaint contained in reference to the resolution offered by Alderman McSpedon on the 9th of November, instant, and the reference thereof.

Eighth—Defendant is ignorant whether 1,740 of said boxes would be sufficient for one election in said City, but alleges that, in consequence of the fragile nature of the material, it was deemed necessary to have a greater number manufactured than were required for actual use, so that, in case of accident, or breaking from any other cause, they might immediately be supplied.

Ninth—Defendant denies that it was given out, as pretended, by defendant Jollie Benjamin Wood or this defendant, or by either of them, to the knowledge of this defendant, to the other members of said Committee, that said Jollie was the patentee of said boxes, or anything else as stated in said complaint, but avers the truth to be that at the time said contract was made, or shortly prior thereto, while said Committee had the subject under consideration, that a specimen of the said ballot-box of said Jollie and of several other ballot-boxes manufactured by other parties, was exhibited to said Committee and to said Board of Police, and that stamped on the iron frame of said box, so exhibited by said Jollie, were the words "Patent applied for;" and this defendant at the time believed that said Jollie was the inventor of said glass ballot-box, and believed that he had applied for a patent therefor, and did not know and had never heard that his said application had been rejected for any cause, but defendant denies that the fact that the said Jollie had applied for a patent for said invention or discovery in any way influenced said Committee or said Board of Police in the selection of the ballot-box of said Jollie, but, on the contrary, he says that said ballot-box of said Jollie was selected by said Committee and by said Board of Police because of its superiority over all others that were presented to said Board.

Tenth—Defendant says that it is wholly and utterly false that this defendant was cognizant of the arrangement between the said Jollie and Benjamin Wood, or that this defendant was in any way, either directly or indirectly, to share in any profit of said contract; and this defendant charges as his belief, that said James Horner, the plaintiff in this action, when he made the said allegation that this defendant was to share in the profits of said contract, knew such charge to be false, and made it willfully and maliciously from personal and political purposes only.

Eleventh—This defendant denies, of his own knowledge, that he is or ever was in any way interested in the said contract, or in any assignment thereof; but, on the contrary thereof, he alleges that he is not now, never was, and never will be interested in said contract in any way, directly or indirectly, or in any share or portion of the profits or proceeds thereof, and that he will neither gain nor lose by the payment of the money for said boxes, or by the withholding thereof.

Twelfth—Defendant denies that said contract was a fraudulent one, and, on the contrary, he charges that said contract was made fairly, and, after an opportunity had been afforded for competition, that it was made with Samuel C. Jollie, whom defendant at that time believed to be the real party to interest in said contract, and the sole and bona fide contractor.

Thirteenth—Defendant denies that he knew at the time of the

The Times for Europe.

The American Mail steamer Adriatic leaves this port for Liverpool, to-day, at 12 o'clock. Her mails will close at the Post-Office at 10½ o'clock.

The edition of the NEW-YORK TIMES, especially adapted for European circulation, will be ready for delivery at the desk this morning.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The mails by the Niagara reached this City yesterday morning. We continue to publish copious extracts from foreign journals on the great financial pressure, now more severely felt in Europe than at any time since its commencement. The articles from the London Times on the advance in the Bank of England's rate of discount to 9 per cent, will be read with interest. There was almost a panic in the London money market, and the suspension of numerous houses in the American trade is reported. The political news by this arrival has been fully anticipated by the telegram from Halifax published in our editions of Thursday. It has been ascertained that the Leviathan steamship has not been strained, or in any manner injured by the attempted launch on the 3d inst. The event is fixed now for the 2d of December. A grand entertainment was given on board the British flag-ship Impregnable, to the officers of the United States frigate Niagara, previous to her departure for this country. A report of the speeches delivered on the occasion will be found elsewhere.

By the arrival at this port of the steamship Black Warrior we receive advices from the Havana to the 16th inst. The news is not important. No more landings of slaves are reported—the reason being that, since the recent seizures, the dealers have grown more cautious.

There was a very large, highly respectable and exceedingly enthusiastic meeting in front of the Exchange, in Wall-street, yesterday afternoon, in response to a call from the Committee appointed by the meeting, held at the same place on Saturday, to nominate an independent candidate for the Mayoralty. As was made known several days ago, the Committee had united upon DANIEL F. TIEMANN, and when the name was announced, the nomination was ratified unanimously. Resolutions were passed, and an Executive Committee appointed. Hon. JAMES E. COOLEY presided, and speeches were made by the President, Messrs. ANTHON, JOSEPH HOXIE, J. C. MONTGOMERY and Recorder SMITH. At the close of the proceedings the meeting adjourned to assemble again at the Academy of Music, on Tuesday evening next.

The William-street murder case drags slowly at the Coroner's inquest. The parties under arrest have not been identified, except the Italian, recognized by Mr. HILTON. One witness, CAROIGIOLI, who professed since his first examination to have seen the whole affair through the shutters or door of Mr. VINCENT's store, was recalled, and, in consequence of his prevarication, was committed by the Coroner in default of $3,000 for his future appearance. FRANCIS VINCENT, Jr., the son of the murdered man, who has been put under arrest, has virtually proved an alibi. His brother-in-law, Mr. WALTER, who lives in Bushwick, states that he (FRANCIS) was at his house in Bushwick on the night of the murder, and that he called him from bed when the messenger arrived with the news of his father's death. Suspicion here, as in the Water-street case, is strongly directed to the Spanish convicts and soldiers who arrived at this port from Cuba, on board the bark Emile, which put in here in distress on her way to Spain.

Coroner CONNERY, in addressing his jury of inquest yesterday, in the case of the William-stree murder, dwelt with much emphasis upon the necessity of having a stronger police force in the Fourth Ward to protect the lives of the citizens from the assassinations so frequently occurring there; the Jury will unite in a request to the Police Commissioners upon this important subject.

The Scotch girl, SUSAN DEMPSEY, one of the persons stabbed Thursday morning in the Water street dance-house, has since died at the City Hospital. The other injured parties who were removed to the Hospital were alive at a late hour last night, but there is no hope of their recovery. The unknown man who was killed outright has not been identified yet. Several persons have been arrested on suspicion of implication in the murder, but only three are retained in custody. One of the three, a Spaniard, who gives his name as MIGUEL AGUILARA, has been identified by one of the girls of the dance-house as a frequent visitor at the house with the two men who committed the murder. It is believed that the murderers belonged to the gang of Spanish convicts and disbanded soldiers who arrived here about a month ago, on board the Spanish brig Emile, bound for Spain, which put into this port in distress. The Coroner's investigation was continued yesterday, and will be resumed again this afternoon.

Between 12 and 1 o'clock yesterday morning Dr. ALEXANDER B. MOTT was assaulted by two ruffians at the corner of Second-avenue and Seventh-street. Pistol shots were exchanged, and one of the assaulting party was wounded. Dr. MOTT escaped uninjured. No arrests have yet been made, but the assassin has been traced a great way by the marks of blood.

Yesterday was the last day of Jury trials in the Court of General Sessions for the November term. JAMES BIGLAN, who pleaded guilty to burglary in the second degree, was sentenced to nine years and six months in the State Prison. JOHN CARROLL, convicted of highway robbery, was sentenced to fourteen years and five months, and his confederate, JAMES BROWN, who pleaded guilty, was also sentenced to fourteen years and five months in the same institution. OWEN KIERNAN, convicted of the manslaughter of JAMES MCDERMOTT, will be sentenced to-day. Sentences will also be passed this morning on JAMES RODGERS for the murder of SWANSTON, and on JOHN B. HOLMES for forging his wife's name to a mortgage deed. The Grand Jury, it is expected, will make an important presentment.

Yesterday morning's returns of the Police Captains give 128 as the number of arrests in the City the night previous. The nativities of the arrested parties are given as follows: Ireland, 85; United States, 22; Germany, 10; England, 8; Scotland, 1; Poland, 1; Prussia, 1. The number of lodgers in the different Ward Station-houses Thursday night, are given as 577, of which 434 were males, and 143 females. The number of applications for lodgings the same night were nearly 1,500. As it was, lodgings were furnished to nearly 200 more than there were proper accommodations for.

There was another large gathering of the unemployed in front of the City Hall yesterday forenoon. Several speeches were made, complaining of the delays of politicians who had promised work to them, and advising the poor to look out for themselves instead of depending upon others. Mr. SMITH, who spoke last, proposed a coat of tar and feathers for the Central Park Commissioners. A gentleman, named MARTEL, proposed, as a meaus of relief, that the City, State, and General Government unite in the erection of an immense building, one side of which should be used as a workshop, and the other as a residence for the poor and unemployed. The people separated with the understanding that they should meet in Tompkins-square, on Tuesday next, and proceed to the Central Park for the purpose of ascertaining definitely whether or not they were to be employed there.

In the case of JAS. HORNER vs. FERNANDO WOOD et al., which is in regard to the glass ballot-box frauds, Mr. WOOD yesterday put in his answer, which is, in substance, a general denial. An order to show cause why the injunction against the defendants should not be dismissed was granted by Judge DAVIES, made returnable on the 28th inst. The sentence of CANGEMI was postponed until Monday, the 30th inst.

The steamer Star of the West left for Aspinwall yesterday with about 500 passengers for California and elsewhere on the Isthmus and South America. Among them was Señor LACAYO, bearer of dispatches from YRISSARI, the Nicaraguan Minister to his Government; Dr. MORITZ WAGNER, the distinguished Bavarian naturalist, who goes to South America on a scientific tour; Mr. HAGAN and Baroness HORMAYER; Lieutenant MCPHERSON, U. S. A., and Messrs. M. L. KENYON, J. BUTTERFIELD, F. DE RUYTER, and S. K. NELLIS, who go out to open up the Pacific Mail Route across the plains, and arrange the western terminus of said route. There were not so many cases of ticket-swindling as usual, but two or three persons were robbed of large sums by the confidence game.

The United States steam frigate Niagara, Captain HUDSON, which left this port on the 24th of last April, to assist in laying down the Atlantic telegraph cable, arrived, yesterday morning, in fourteen days and four hours from Plymouth, England, having sailed thence on the 5th inst. She encountered heavy westerly gales throughout most of the passage, during which she performed admirably. The officers and crew arrived in good health.

The light receipts of Breadstuffs, the cold weather, and the anticipation of an early suspension of the land navigation, gave sellers the advantage, yesterday. Flour advanced 5c.@10c. ₱ bbl., with a good inquiry for home use and for shipment. Wheat and Corn were sparingly offered, and the transactions therein were not large. Prices were well sustained. The movements in Provisions and Groceries were generally less extensive, and the tendency of prices was in favor of buyers. Cotton was dull and heavy, though not plenty. A little more animation was reported in freights, without any remarkable change in rates.

DANIEL LYNCH, a laboring man, who took passage Thursday night at Rondout on the steamer North America, which plies between that place and this City, met with a terrible accident. Having drank freely, he wandered unconsciously into the engine-room, where he was caught in the machinery and his head cut clear from his body. The body was untouched, but the head was horribly mashed. A bottle of brandy was found in one of his pockets.

The ladies of the Industrial School held a meeting at the Chapel of the New-York University, yesterday, at 11 A. M. Mr. C. L. BRACE delivered an interesting address, and the reports of the different Industrial Schools were read, showing that their general condition is good.

Yesterday, with military honors by the 7th Company National Guards, the late Mr. CURTIS JUDSON was buried. Mr. JUDSON was widely known as a first-class hotel keeper.

The Mayoralty.

The public sentiment concerning the Mayoralty election is rapidly taking a form which promises a sharp, well-defined and decisive contest. Partly in consequence of the judicious change made by the new law in the time for holding it, and partly in consequence of the official career and character of Mayor WOOD, political partisanship is utterly discarded in this canvass. There has been no election in this City for ten years, less under the control of party politics than this will be. No party desires to run a party candidate. The Democrats do not support Mayor WOOD as a party man. The obligations of party discipline do not reach this contest. He has been made, it is true, the party nominee, but it was done by his own intrigues and not by the voluntary action of the great body of the party itself. It was done, moreover, before the State election, and as part of the general political programme; and now that the State election is over, and has resulted in a Democratic victory, the Democrats of the City see no necessity for making a new party fight, which promises less satisfactory party results. If they should reelect Mayor WOOD, it would be by a diminished majority, and would be quoted as conclusive evidence of a falling off in the Democratic strength. As a body, therefore, and even acting from motives of party policy, they prefer to decline a party contest which cannot possibly improve, and may very materially weaken, their party position. They are content to let well enough alone. As a party, therefore, they will rest upon the laurels of November, and leave the December battle to be fought upon the more legitimate and less perilous field of City interests. A very large number of the most active and influential leaders of the Democratic Party are, therefore, acting with entire disregard of party discipline, and are supporting, with energy and determination, the real Democratic candidate, Mr. TIEMANN. They allege that he has always been a Democrat, that he was nominated by a Committee of which a majority were Democrats, and that his election is required by the best interests of the Democratic Party, as well as of the City at large.

The other political parties present no party candidates, and unite in support of Mr. TIEMANN. The American nominee, Mr. COOLEY, not only withdraws, but enters with great energy and effect upon the canvass against Mayor WOOD. The Republicans have formally resolved to present no candidate, but to support Mr. TIEMANN, upon grounds of the public welfare.

We shall thus have a square, stand-up contest between WOOD and TIEMANN,—both Democrats, both men of energy, and neither likely to lose the battle for lack of effort. It is a contest of men and not of parties. The people of the City have to decide which of the two they prefer for Mayor?—which can be trusted best with the care of the City:—which has the most integrity, the most regard for the public good, the least selfish and unprincipled ambition, and the greatest ability and disposition to raise our municipal government out of the degradation and contempt into which it has fallen. They have had experience of both, and are perfectly able to form a safe and reliable judgment. Alderman TIEMANN has been in the Common Council for several years. He was always attentive, intelligent, vigilant and of unsuspected and even unslandered integrity. Not a man connected with the Government was ever more resolute in resisting fraud, extravagance or misconduct of any kind, than he. The Herald has denounced him as being "respectable," and therefore "imbecile." The charge is true, but the inference false—as often happens to the Herald's logic. He is eminently a man of energetic and vigorous character, and any body who counts upon his "respectability," as affording impunity or indifference for rascality of any sort, reckons without his host. Mr. TIEMANN is not inferior to either Mr. COOLEY or Mr. HAVEMEYER in the very qualities which have commended them both so strongly to public favor.

As to Mayor WOOD, the people of this City we believe, very generally concur with the opinion which we have frequently expressed, that he so uses and perverts abilities which might make him the best—as actually to make him the worst—Mayor this City has ever had. His executive talent is very marked: he understands the business and the needs of the City: he is personally resolute and even reckless in his courage: but instead of devoting these rare qualities to the promotion of the public good, he uses them solely and exclusively for the advancement of his personal and political fortunes. He prostitutes, deliberately and systematically, every power of his office to his own advancement. No man in office has ever made so many good promises, or broken them so often. He came into power with the most extravagant declarations of his intention to reform abuses, correct errors, supply defects, prevent frauds, diminish taxation, and in every possible way amend the government of which he had been made the head. The people of the City gave him the fullest and most unreserved confidence. They believed in him, trusted him, praised him, and refused to believe anything to his discredit. Even the most suspicious of them insisted, and very properly, that he should have a fair trial. And having had it, we believe there is no longer any difference of opinion upon his official conduct. He has in turn flattered and betrayed every class and every interest. He has courted alternately the highest and the lowest,—the best and the worst portions of the community. He has resisted the laws, and brought the City to the very verge of civil commotion. He seduced the old Police, for his own ends, into a position of hostility to the law, and, as a reward for their devotion, kept them out of the new organization which had been framed expressly to keep them in. He has excited discontent, disaffection, and the most absurd expectations among those whom the financial troubles have deprived of employment, and has menaced the peace, order, and security of the public, in the desperate attempt to retrieve his waning political fortunes. Under his administration taxation has increased, and crime has more than kept pace with it. His influence has placed the worst men of the whole community in high judicial office, has given impunity to violence and disorder, and has made the government of this City a scandal and a reproach throughout the world.

A very large and influential portion of the people feel that, for their own credit as well as security, it is quite time the official career of such a man was closed. Whether this is the opinion of the majority, we shall soon have an opportunity of knowing. But the People themselves are quite as much upon trial, in this matter, as either of the candidates.

The Central Park.

"Mayor WOOD's men" have done more mischief than they will ever be able to undo. Taking their cue from their irresponsible and reckless leader, they have busily endeavored to disseminate the impracticable doctrines and the delusive hopes of a fantastic Socialism among the excited and suffering multitudes of the "Unemployed." The nonsensical project of the "50,000 barrels of flour" has been represented to these unhappy people as the noble device of an intelligent charity, and as hungry men can hardly be expected to be critical, the explosive assertions of the "poets and bill-posters" have been greedily accepted by the audiences of Tompkins-square and the Park. It is not surprising, therefore, that a dangerous misconception should now be extensively prevalent among the poor, with regard to the objects of the appropriation recently made by the Common Council for the work upon the Central Park. It seems to be vaguely believed that the $250,000 of this appropriation are simply a gigantic contribution to the public charities, and that the Park has been constituted a sort of "national workshop," on the principle of those vast manufactories of idleness and disorder which were established in France under the Provisional Government of 1848—that every laboring man in the City who can find no employment elsewhere, is to go or to be sent to the office of the Superintendent of the Park, there to be enrolled on the lists of that office, and from that moment to find himself in the regular receipt of daily wages, whether there be or be not any daily work for him to do.

Now this is a frightful folly, if it be not something worse. The Central Park is a public enterprise, not a public charity. The Commissioners and the Superintendent of the Central Park are not the almoners of a Communistic Government, but the responsible agents of the tax-payers of this City, charged to see that no waste is made of the public property confided to their care. It is physically impossible that all the men who want work in this City, or any very considerable body of them, should be employed upon the Central Park at this season of the year, and while we have no reason to believe that the officers in charge of that property will be backward in using the means at their disposal for the relief of the actual distress of the laboring class so far as they have any right to do so, public opinion will not support them in any submission to the unreasonable demands of senseless or designing demagogues. The people must be made to understand that their worst friends are those uproarious talkers who keep luring them on into one folly of expectation after another, and that their best hope of steady employment and of ameliorated circumstances during the Winter lies in the prospect of putting at the head of affairs in this City a practical and respectable man, who will hasten the restoration of public prosperity by assisting the return of public confidence.

THE KANSAS FREE-STATE PARTY.—The National Era, which is decidedly the ablest, because the most rational and least passionate, anti-Slavery journal in the United States, thus speaks of the duty of the Free-State men in Kansas, in regard to the popular vote upon the State Constitution:

"If the Constitution on the whole is a good one, and by their vote they can make it a free one, and so organize Kansas as a Free State, that vote ought not to be withheld, merely because the Convention was illegitimate, or the offspring of a minority vote; or because the Free-State Party had already agreed upon a Constitution; or because it was resolved to stamp with perpetual reprobation the party which had achieved ascendency by fraud, and continued it by oppression. A vote making the Constitution free, and organizing Kansas as a Free State under it, would prove the subversion of that party—something better and more important than simple reprobation. No such motives as these, we say, should control the Free-State men, independently of other considerations."

It seems to be generally conceded that, in the main, and with the exception of the Slavery clause, the new Constitution of Kansas is not obnoxious to any very serious objection. Its provisions are substantially such as are embodied in all the more recent Constitutions of the other States. At all events, whatever defects it may contain, can be so readily remedied by the action of the People, after they once obtain the sovereignty over their own affairs which the admission of the State would give them, that it seems unwise to throw away the opportunity of voting.

OUR POLICE DEPARTMENT.—The Board of Police Commissioners are fairly at work. The new member, Mr. PERIT, devotes himself to the business of the Board with a vigilance and industry which indicate very clearly the public motives which led him to accept the post. He resists all attempts to postpone or delay the business of the Board, upon whatever pretext they may be made. He opposed an adjournment last week when it was asked by Republican members, because they were not ready to act upon the new appointments. He opposed it day before yesterday, when Mayor WOOD desired it, because he did not find it convenient to attend.

The result was that some thirty new members were added to the Police Force, and steps were taken for the immediate appointment of as many more. This is action in the right direction. The dreadful prevalence and rapid increase of the most terrible crimes demands the speedy increase of our Police Force. Every one knows that 800 men cannot by any possibility discharge the duties which are required of the Police. The only way in which this Department can be effective is by having in it men enough to patrol the whole City,—to be present constantly at every point. This is physically impossible with the present force. The old Police contained 1,600 men, and yet Mayor WOOD was constantly, and with perfect justice, complaining that it was entirely inadequate to the duties required at its hands. The present force is only half that number, and although it is composed of better material, and is under better supervision than any other Police we have ever had, it is far inferior in point of numbers to the requirements of the City.

We trust the Commissioners will proceed with all convenient dispatch to fill up the force. We hope, moreover, that they will find that the police law offers no insurmountable obstacle to their availing themselves of the services of some of the members of the old Police. There are among them men of experience, character and decided ability in this department,—and it seems to us highly important their services should be secured. We do not refer to the noisy, active politicians among them to whom Mayor WOOD's unavailing sympathies seem to have been confined,—but to the much larger class of men who have been distinguished for the attention and efficiency with which they have performed the duties of their office. Justice to the City, as well as to them, requires that their services should be retained.

THE PANIC AND THE TELEGRAPH.—The panic which overtook us last month in our headlong career of prosperity, has spread across the Atlantic, and, from the accounts which have reached us by the Niagara, appears to be operating there precisely as it did here. Its course and effects have been as mysterious and unavoidable as the first visit of the cholera. While we were suffering from it our English cotemporaries were enjoying comparatively a quiet and easy time, and indulging in very natural speculations on the wholly unnecessary terror which had taken possession of our commercial public; they could see no adequate cause for such a state of affairs as existed among us; but suddenly they discovered that the panic was at their own door, and that it was as causeless and destructive there as it had been here. Now the reflection naturally arises that these panics might have been greatly mitigated in their disastrous influences, if not altogether prevented, if the Atlantic telegraph had been in operation, by which we could have known simultaneously the true condition of our affairs on each side of the ocean. The Bank of England would not have resorted to such extreme measures, which have been so injurious to British merchants, to restrain the export of specie to this country, if it had been known that we stood in no need of it, and that it would be immediately sent back again. It is certainly greatly within the bounds of probability to state that if the telegraph had been successfully laid it would have more than paid for its entire cost during the last month by the enormous losses which it might have prevented. That fatal snap of the telegraphic cable on the 10th of August, which caused a thrill throughout the whole civilized world, was fraught with greater consequences than were ever anticipated. The thought of what the telegraph might have accomplished for the commercial world, should be a new motive for attempting the completion of the great work next year.

MAYOR WOOD'S MATERIAL.—The Irish American closes an article upon the Mayoralty election thus:

"There is not now a reasonable doubt that Mayor WOOD's majority will be the largest ever polled for the same office. In addition to the large number of adopted citizens who, almost without exception, voted for him last year, over 2,000 have been naturalized since the present canvass commenced, and of these it is not too much to say he will receive the support of ninety-nine out of every hundred."

Later from Havana.

ARRIVAL OF THE BLACK WARRIOR.

The U. S. M. steamship Black Warrior, R. W. SMITH, Commander, from New-Orleans 12th, Havana 15th inst., arrived at this port yesterday morning.

Business in Havana is very dull. Sugars are declining, and we note but few transactions. Stock at Havana and Matanzas 170,000 boxes. Freights for Europe falling off. Exchange on London 10½ to 11 ₱ cent. premium; on New York, 2½ to 3 ₱ cent. premium; United States gold coin, 3 ₱ cent. premium.

Mrs. Cunningham's Trial.

The Goshen Democrat states that at the opening of the November term of the Supreme Court, at Newburg, Judge STRONG presiding, the District-Attorney of Orange Court, produced a letter from District-Attorney HALL, of New-York, desiring an adjournment of the Court until December, for the purpose of trying Mrs. CUNNINGHAM's case at that time. The Court, however, was not willing to make such an order upon a mere written request from Mr. HALL. Hence the case, if tried in Orange County, must go over to next Circuit, which will be held at Newburg.

WISCONSIN.—It is yet uncertain whether CROSS or RANDALL is Governor of Wisconsin. The Democrats have for two weeks claimed the election of CROSS, but the returns indicate that the choice lies within a hundred votes either way. The Madison Argus, of the 15th, says: "The result is narrowing down to as close a thing as has ever been witnessed in this country." Its returns elect RANDALL (Republican) by thirty-eight votes, as follows: Majorities for RANDALL, 9,207; for CROSS, 9,169. Three counties remain to be heard from.

Departure of the Adriatic.

The departure of the steamship Adriatic on her first voyage across the Atlantic is an event in our current history entitled to a special notice. It does not, indeed, mark the commencement of a new era in navigation, as the first trip of the Clermont up the Hudson, or the first passage of the Sirius across the Atlantic did, but it marks an epoch in the history of steam navigation. The Adriatic is not only the largest steamship afloat, but the largest vessel of any kind that has been launched, as she is believed to be the best, in all respects. She is, therefore, at the present time, the champion of the seas, and is likely to continue so until the Leviathan shall be launched and afloat. Then we shall, of course, resign the ocean belt to Great Britain, but, until then, we may be allowed to claim the distinction of having sent to sea the largest and finest vessel that ever clove the waves of the boisterous Atlantic.

The Adriatic has been at once a source of pride and mortification to our people. When we chronicled the event of her splendid launch on the 7th of April, 1856, we stated that it was calculated that she would be ready for sea in the following month of September. That was then the expectation of her builder and proprietors; but, from the magnitude of the undertaking, the machinery was not completed until four months after the time stipulated for by the builders of the engines. This delay caused various unfavorable, but wholly unfounded reports, respecting the noble ship to be circulated, and great disappointment was felt by those who had boasted of the performances of the ship when she should have an opportunity of testing her qualities at sea. The cause of the delay in the completion of the engines lay, undoubtedly, with the head of the Novelty Works, who had introduced a new cone valve in the place of the old-fashioned poppet. What may have been the defects or the merits of this invention, we cannot pretend to decide at this time, but the proprietors of the ship, having become dissatisfied with the working of the engines after steam had been put upon them, determined to remove the new valves and substitute the old-fashioned poppet; before the work had been completed, however, they determined to adopt the Sickles cut-off, and accordingly placed the ship in the hands of Messrs. SICKLES & DICKERSON to complete the engines. But, when their work was completed it was found not to be satisfactory, and the ship was once more recommitted to the care of the original builders of her engines, who have put into her the machinery which was found to act so well on her trial-trip, and with which she will go to sea.

The machinery of the Adriatic consists of two of the largest oscillating engines that have ever been constructed; they are of the technical horse-power of 1,500, but in reality they are equal to 2,800 or 3,000. There are eight principal boilers, each with furnaces ranged side by side, so that the whole number of furnaces is forty-eight. Besides these there are two extra boilers to be used when desired. The vessel will carry, for the supply of her boilers during a single passage across the Atlantic, from 1,200 to 1,500 tons of coal. She is supplied with patent condensers, the cold water running through 12,000 circulating copper pipes, condensing the steam in its course, saving, as it is said, nearly $75,000 per annum in fuel and wear and tear when the ship is running. The piston rods are fifteen inches in diameter, and the shaft twenty inches in diameter, of solid wrought iron. The furnaces require from fifty to sixty firemen and coal-passers, and no less than six engineers will be required to attend the engines. The wheels are each forty feet in diameter and twelve feet face, and have a dip of from eight to nine feet.

What the Adriatic may accomplish remains to be proved, and as we shall so soon know the result of her first voyage, it will be idle to boast of her speed and safety now; but we know her beauty of model, the unequaled elegance of her interior arrangements for passengers, the superiority of her dimensions over any other vessel afloat, and the grace and loveliness of her lines as she sits upon the water; we know, too, what her performances were on her trial trip, and we may confidently anticipate, setting aside the accidents which all ships must encounter, that she will fully justify all that her admirers have predicted of her.

In bulk the Adriatic is 354 feet in length, or nine feet longer than the United States frigate Niagara; fifty feet broad, and thirty-three feet two inches in depth. She measures 5,900 tons, or 700 tons more than the Niagara, 800 more than the Vanderbilt, and 2,900 more than the Atlantic! Yet such is the exquisite harmony of her proportions and the gracefulness of her lines, that seen at a short distance, without any object by which her size may be compared, she appears hardly larger than an ordinary yacht.

We have before given a full description of the passenger accommodations of this magnificent vessel, and it will, therefore, be useless to repeat them now. In all her interior arrangements she is greatly superior to any other vessel that has been in our harbor, and not only has every thing been done to add to the comfort, and even luxurious enjoyment of the passengers at sea, but everything that will tend to secure their safety and prevent the occasion of accidents. She is abundantly provided with life-boats, and among other new arrangements the calcium light which she carries at her fore-topmast head will not only be a security against a collision with another vessel but, by enabling the look-out to discover objects at a distance of three or four miles in the dark, will greatly lessen the chances of accidents at night. She has accommodations for about four hundred passengers, three hundred of them being first-class.

Her working force, numbering one hundred and eighty-eight men, is distributed as follows: 1 commander, 4 mates, 1 surgeon, 1 purser, 4 quartermasters, 2 carpenters, 1 boatswain, 36 seamen, 1 engineer, 3 assistants, 6 superintendents of fires and boilers, 4 oilers, 2 engineers' store-keepers, 24 firemen, 36 coal-passers, 1 steward, 3 assistants, 36 waiters, 3 stewardesses, 2 store-keepers, 1 bar-keeper, 1 barber, 1 chief-cook, 1 assistant-cook, 1 baker, 2 pastry-cooks, 2 engineers' messmen, 2 keepers of lamps and oil, 1 hose-keeper.

The cost of this superb ship, it is said, has been nearly a million of dollars, and, on every occasion in which the manager of the Collins line has made allusion to the Adriatic in public, he has accorded to Mr. JAMES BROWN, of the firm of BROWN, BROTHERS & CO., the credit of having sustained the enterprise by his munificent liberality. The Adriatic goes out on her first voyage under the charge of Captain WEST, formerly of the Atlantic, one of the most careful and best experienced Captains of our mercantile marine. It is a saddening thought that the young mechanic whose genius modeled this superb ship, and who superintended her construction, is not alive to witness her first triumphs.

The Adriatic leaves her dock to-day at 12 o'clock. In the quaint words of the old bills of lading we sincerely say, "and so God give the good ship a safe and speedy voyage."

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The last night of the present season, (how often we have to write the same words,) gave us the "Sonnambula," thus terminating a brief and disastrous campaign with the opera that inaugurated it. The cast, with the exception of the Armina, was the same; the heroine in this instance, however, was Madame LA GRANGE, a change which was by no means to be regretted. It is one of this excellent lady's best parts.

We are happy to say that the difficulties with regard to the orchestra and chorus are at an end, and that the season, although stopped for the moment, will recommence some time next week. With reduced expenses, and a new attraction in the person of Herr FORMES, it is to be hoped that the next season will be longer and more prosperous than the last. There will, of course, be no performance on Sunday.

CHARITY CONCERT.—A Charitable Concert, for the relief of the poor in the northwestern section of the City, will be given on Tuesday evening next, under the direction of a committee of ladies, at the Church corner of Fifth-avenue and Thirty-fifth-street. A varied programme is offered, and the object of the Concert should commend it to the favorable regard of the benevolent.

The New-York Post-Office—Interview of the Councilmen Committee with the Postmaster-General.

The Speakership—The Naval Courts—Nicaraguan Affairs—Utah, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Nov. 20.

The Committee of the New-York Councilmen, appointed to negotiate the sale of a site to the Government for the Post-Office, arrived here last night. They had an interview with Postmaster-General BROWN to-day, and presented the subject, with maps, explanations, &c. Mr. BROWN appointed another interview for to-morrow.

There is little doubt that he will meet their views, and accept the lower angle of the Park for the site, as an examination shows that there is ample room and that it is the only point at which the omnibuses from every part of the City concentrate—thus affording extraordinary public convenience.

I understand that the New-York Democratic Congressional Delegation, at their meeting at Delmonico's the other night, agreed on ORR for Speaker. The majority were also for ALLEN, of Illinois, for Clerk. In relation to a candidate for Doorkeeper, they were hopelessly divided.

In the Naval Courts, the case of Lieut. NOLAND has been resumed, and the cases of Lieut. BROWNELL and Commander GEDNEY have been commenced.

There is a rumor afloat that an arrangement exists between the friends of Gen. WALKER and the JOSEPH L. WHITE Nicaragua Transit party, by which they are to row in the same boat. This would not be surprising, for each is necessary to the other. S.

THE UNEMPLOYED.

Mass Meeting at the City Hall—Politicians Denounced—Smith proposes Tar and Feathers—Preparations to Flog the Employed.

In accordance with the adjournment on Thursday, some two thousand of the unemployed yesterday gathered in front of the City Hall, for the purpose of further considering what plan of action would best tend to afford them employment. It was expected that Mr. GORDON, Chairman of the Committee that reported and advised at the meeting on Thursday, would announce the organization, but before that could be done, Mr. MARTEL mounted the steps and commenced a speech. After the usual statements of the promises and delays of politicians, he gave it as his opinion that the City, State, and General Governments should unite in the erection of an immense structure for the accommodation of workingmen. The plan or specifications he was not then prepared to give, further than that it should be so constructed that one side should be used to work in, and the other fitted up for residences. Mr. MARTEL'S remarks put the audience in the best of humor. He was followed by Mr. GORDON, who repeated, in some measure, the advice given by him on Thursday. From the opportunity he had had for observing those in power who had promised to give them work, he had been enabled to form a pretty decided opinion as to what was to be expected from them; and that was just nothing at all. It was their policy to keep them along with promises so that they might receive their votes at the coming election. It had come to be said now, "If you vote for me, I will give you work, but you must vote for me first." Some men might be inclined to place some confidence in even such a promise, but if they did, they would find themselves mistaken The men who had promised to give them work were too selfish to do anything for them unless it would certainly redound to their own advantage. They knew that there were thousands of familes suffering now, while they had it in their power to set them to work—there was Corporation work enough ready now to give employment to thousands, that a vote of the Common Council, and the signature of the Mayor, could set in motion. The Street Commissioner was ready to go on with it as soon as they would let him. But although they knew the unemployed were suffering, they would not do it. They would keep them suffering in the hope of forcing them to vote for them. But was it likely that men holding places of trust from the people, who would force suffering upon them, instead of doing all they could for their benefit, would faithfully fulfill any promise after they had secured all their share of the advantage? [Cries of "No, No—they are humbugs and cheats."] Mr. GORDON had to report to them also that after the meeting on Thursday the Committee, with the exception of Mr. DONNELLY, who was sick, waited upon the authorities at Central Park, and were assured by them that they had a recommended list of one thousand who were in need, and who were able and willing to work, and that they would be employed on the Park between then and Monday next—by Monday one thousand should be employed. [Cheers, and cries of "That's good."]

Mr. GORDON was followed by Mr. RICHARD MOORE. He did not see that sufficient progress had been made in obtaining work. Instead of one thousand, six or eight thousand might have been employed, had the authorities exerted themselves in their behalf as they should have done. Instead of giving them work, they were trying to keep them off and on, with fair promises until they could secure their votes at the election. He advised the men to look at the subject, and then judge for themselves whether they had not better begin to look out for their own interests, instead of depending entirely upon the caprice of others. He thought they should request the Commissioners of the Central Park to employ only those who really needed employment; and instead of keeping any single thousand at work all the time, to divide the needy into lists of thousands and give them work for three days each, in rotation. That plan would afford relief to a much larger number, and he believed it could be done with very little trouble if the Commissioners were disposed to adopt it. He would also have those who were very much in need of work watch whether any were employed who, under the circumstauces, had no good right to be. If there were, they should be told to give way to those more in need of employment, and if that would not do, there were needy men enough to flog them off. [Applause.] He would recommend that the plan he had proposed for employing the men should be laid before the Commissioners, and for that purpose he moved that the meeting adjourn to meet again in Tompkins-square at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning next, and from there march to Central Park, and there learn definitely from the Commissioners whether they were to be employed or not. [Great applause.] In order to show how many were in need of employment, he desired that every man should bring out every unemployed neighbor he knew. [Applause.]

When Mr. MOORE had retired it was thought the meeting had adjourned. But Mr. MARTEL appeared again, and waiving his hat, raised his voice in favor of his plan for an immense building in which the poor could eat, sleep and work. Before he had time to develop his plan, there was a powerful moving about of the crowd on the steps, by which Mr. MARTEL was carried to the bottom in some disorder. As soon as the fun was over Mr. SMITH, of the Steuben Hall Committee, appeared, and was invited by many to "go in" and "give it mouth." Mr. SMITH regretted that there was a disposition among the unemployed towards disunion. The gentlemen composing the other Committee (Mr. GORDON'S) had split off, and now the old Committee, of which he was a member, were denounced as a lot of politicians and rumsellers. [Laughter.] Now, if any of the Committee were in the rum business he did not know it. [Cries of "MCGUIRE, MCGUIRE."] No, said Mr. SMITH, MCGUIRE is not. He is no relation to the McGuires in Second-avenue. He told me he was in the old iron business, when there was anything to do in that way. [Great laughter.] It had been charged that the old Committee had been sold—that they had received money for what they did. That was not true. He had been offered a dollar a day to break stones, just to keep him quiet, not that they had any love for him, and he had refused to take it. He was working for the interest of the unemployed, and would not sell himself to any man. But he could not see how they were to be benefited by meeting together. They had already been to Central Park, and what was the result? Why, that they came away the same as they went. He thought the Commissioners were to blame, and believed a good coat of tar and feathers would be good for them. [Applause.] He concluded by proposing three groans for the Central Park Commissioners. [Three groans were given.]

Mr. MOORE then came forward, and moved an adjournment, which was carried, and the meeting separated.

RUM'S DOINGS.

Horrible Accident on a Steamboat—A Passenger's Head Cut Off by the Engine.

An inquest was held yesterday by Coroner GAMBLE on board the steamboat North America, lying at the foot of Warren-street, on the body of a man who met with a sudden and terrible death on board the boat, during its passage Thursday night from Rondout to this City. According to the testimony of the Clerk of the boat, the deceased came on board the steamer at Rondout on Thursday afternoon and paid his passage to this City, he being somewhat intoxicated at the time. About half an hour after the boat left the Rondout dock the body of the deceased was discovered in the crank-room, and the head completely severed from the body, lying near it, but horribly crushed and mutilated. It was impossible to state the precise manner in which the unfortunate man lost his life, but the appearance and position of the body left no doubt that he entered the engine-room, and from being unable, through the liquor he had drank, to keep his balance properly, he came in contact with the machinery. A verdict was rendered by the Jury in accordance with the facts stated.

The name of the deceased is supposed to be DANIEL LYNCH, but nothing was ascertained respecting his residence or relations. His dress and general appearance indicated that he was a laboring man. In one of his pockets was found a bottle of brandy.

MORE OF RUM'S DOINGS.—Coroner HILLS held an inquest yesterday on the body of CARR. WILSON, an intemperate woman, who resided at No. 7 Desbrosses stree. The evidence showed that deceased came home intoxicated, and in endeavoring to go up stairs, fell and was so injured that she died. A verdict was rendered accordingly. Deceased was a German woman, 45 years of age.

The United States steam frigate Niagara, Capt. HUDSON, which sailed from Plymouth, England, on the 5th inst., arrived this morning, all well, making the passage in a little over fourteen days. The Niagara has encountered continuous westerly gales nearly the whole passage, but the performance of the noble ship is spoken of with admiration by the officers. The engines performed with the utmost regularity, and the trip, considering the heavy head-sea and gales encountered, is regarded as a great success.

She was from Bombay, and put into Mauritius, July 15; after discharging cargo and repairing damages received, sailed again Sept. 3. Captain LAWRENCE C. FIRE IN WILLIAM-STREET.—At 7 o'clock last evening, Officer MICHAEL of the Second Precinct Police, perceived a volume of smoke and flame bursting from the second story window of the building No. 88 William-street, near Maiden-lane. The alarm was sounded immediately and the firemen were soon on the ground. They did not succeed in subduing the flames until the interior of the building was entirely consumed. J. DERVISINES & Co., Importers of French and English Fancy Goods, occupied the upper part of the building and on the first story was the paper ware-room of Messrs. MALLORY & BUTLER. Fulton and the adjacent streets were filled with a dense smoke soon after the fire broke out. None of the adjacent buildings were injured.

Police Intelligence.

SEIZURE OF STOLEN GOODS.—A few nights since the shoe store corner Sixth-avenue and Fifty-fourth-street, was broken into by burglars, and about $500 worth of boots and shoes stolen. Mrs. Curry, the owner of the store, gave information of the robbery to the Police of the Twenty-second Ward, and Officers Harrold and Hyatt were given the case in charge. They ascertained that a man had offered some of the stolen boots and shoes at a shoe store in the Bowery, near Prince-street. They succeeded in getting on the track of the man, and traced him to No. 32 Elizabeth-street, when they arrested him. He gave his name as Anthony Nolan, and said that two women who were in the house were his sisters. The officers searched the house, and found a chest of hardware, nearly three hundred pounds of horse-shoe nails, a quantity of planes, and three boxes of boots and shoes. The goods were taken to the Deputy Superintendent's office for identification, and the accused detained for examination.

BOLD ROBBERY.—A young man, giving his name as John McCan, yesterday afternoon unlocked, with a false key, a sample case of gold pencils and pens belonging to Mr. Stephen M. Griswold, No. 177 Broadway, and deliberately walked off with the contents of the case. A gentleman who witnessed the cool performance followed the rascal until a policeman hove in sight, when he had him arrested. The property was restored to its owner, and the accused locked up in the Tombs in default of $1,000 bail.

HERRING & CO.'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES.—The subscribers, grateful for past favors, and finding that a discriminating public were bestowing their patronage to that extent that more warerooms were necessary to exhibit all their stock, have enlarged their dépôt, by opening an extensive ware and sales room on Broadway, at No. 251, corner of Murray-st., opposite the City Hall. This enlargement of warehouse room, with the recent extensive enlargement of their factory, will enable the subscribers to keep on hand at all times a larger stock of fire and burglar-proof safes than any other establishment in the world. Particular attention will be had to constructing safes for private families to match with other furniture, for the security of plate and jewelry, (and housekeepers are invited to call and examine for themselves.) Also, will keep on hand and make to order, all kinds of money chests, vault doors and bank vaults. Hall's patent powder-proof locks for banks or store doors. Jones' patent permutation bank lock, and Orrgier's patent letter lock, without key.

Mr. LANSING BONNELL, Milwaukie,
Agent for Herring & Co.'s Patent Safes.
DEAR SIR: The Herring Champion Safe that I purchased of you, was in my store at the time it was burned last March. The heat was so great that it melted off the brass plates and knob on the front of the safe. The door was warped so badly from the heat, that I was obliged to cut it open. But I am happy to say to you, the contents of the safe were preserved to my perfect satisfaction.

WHITNEY.—In Brooklyn, on Tuesday, Nov. 17, MARIE LOUISE WHITNEY.
There were but few, if any, who did not highly esteem this lovely flower of human kind. Her high tone of feeling, together with a keen perception of justice, honor and purity, commanded great respect from a large circle of friends. Her noble heart was ever ready to sympathize with another's woes, and disinterestedness was manifested to a fault in her charitable deeds to the needy. Having an intellect of no ordinary cast, her powers of discrimination was keen—leaning on a base sure and steadfast—that of her Redeemer. And as all other choice flowers, her career was destined to be of short duration, for she was delicate, and susceptible to every atmospherical change; and when the last unrelenting and unmerciful destroyer fell on her, baffling all human skill to give relief, she, with sufferings of short duration, and, as it were, some chilling blast on a precious rose, droopsd her head and died without a struggle.
FROM ONE WHO HIGHLY ESTEEMED HER WORTH.

ENGLISH AND FRENCH.
It is quite proper in the English language to speak of merchandise that sells readily as goods that "sell well." The same idea, if expressed in French, would be that the goods "sold themselves" well. That is precisely the case with DAILEY'S stock. Their dinner and tea sets, as well as gas fixtures, silver-plated ware, &c., &c., positively the prices are so low. Any one can see that by looking at their prices in the show-windows of their stores, Nos. 631 and 633 Broadway.
"SELL THEMSELVES,"

OXYGENATED BITTERS IN EUROPE.—From Rev. L. Doolittle, a well-known clergyman.
PARIS, Nov. 1, 1852.—DEAR SIR: About two years since I made use of a few bottles of your OXYGENATED BITTERS, for a stomach complaint, which was at that time relieved. Since my stay in England and France, I have found my old enemy, irritability of the stomach, returning again. I have not found any prescription to afford me relief, and I made inquiries in London for your OXYGENATED BITTERS, but could not find any. I write now to beg you will do me the favor to send by the earliest steamer to Havre, half a dozen bottles. An old friend of mine in England, Captain Jackson, of the British Army, I found on my arrival, suffering from the asthma, manifestly the result of dyspepsia. Send an additional half dozen bottles; I should like to have the Captain try the medicine. I am not aware that my name is known to you. I have been the resident clergyman for some 21 years, in Sherbrook, Canada, to which charge I hope to be able to return in the Spring.
I remain, dear Sir, your obedient servant,
L. DOOLITTLE.

DR. BONE, THE ROOT DOCTOR, ON CURABILITY OF CONSUMPTION.
LETTER No. 5.
CURABILITY OF CONSUMPTION.
It is supposed by most persons that Consumption is not curable. When a friend is attacked, they generally give up all hopes of recovery. We are too hasty. Indeed, it is beyond dispute that the lungs recover from this disease the same as other organs do from other diseases, though less frequently. I believe every case can be cured, if the powers of nature are sufficient, with proper treatment, to bring a reaction. Besides, it is our duty to help, when we cannot cure, which always can be done, even in the last stages. The fact that scars are often discovered in the lungs of persons, on post-mortem examinations, who have been cured of consumption and have died from other diseases, prove beyond doubt that Consumption is curable.
Dr. L. H. BONE, the Root Doctor, son and successor to old Dr. Christian Bone, office No. 284 Grand-st., near Eldridge, New-York City.

A woman with a romantic history attached to her life, made an unsuccessful attempt to drown herself in Cincinnati last week. She is a native of New-York, and at 17 married an old bachelor, who died in a year, and left her $10,000. The money was in the hands of his brother, who cheated her out of it. Two years after, she married a widower, at whose death she came into possession of $30,000. This money she intrusted to others, and again lost the whole. She then sought relatives at the West, and finally married again in Cincinnati. The third husband proved to be a drunken brute, and she, disheartened by calamities, attempted to take her own life. She was discovered in time to prevent a fatal result, and is now in Cincinnati.

The citizens of Hartford on Wednesday evening gave a complimentary dinner to the sculptor, Bartholomew, and Church, the artist. Mr. Church was not able to be present, but Mr. Bartholomew responded to a complimentary toast. Mayor Deming presided, and an original humorous poem, prepared for the occasion, was recited by Mr. George H. Clarke. The affair was very pleasant. The Hartford Times states that Colonel Colt has ordered marble busts of himself, wife and child, from Mr. Bartholomew.

One Clara Vincent, the niece of a boarding-house keeper in Cincinnati, was the cause of great distress to a fast young man who applied for rooms. He liked the place and tried to kiss the young lady, whereupon she scratched his face, pulled out his hair and damaged him generally. He brought an action for assault and battery, but afterwards withdrew the complaint.

Dr. Moritz Wagner, the German naturalist, is in this City, having arrived by the Ariel, on his way to a scientific exploration of South America. He is accompanied by the Baroness Havmayer, a celebrated lady traveler, and by Mr. Hagen, a German painter of some note.

Mrs. Jane G. Swisshelm, who formerly conducted the Pittsburg Visiter, with spirit, has assumed the editorship of the St. Cloud Advertiser, in Minnesota.

An Albany man advertises for his runaway wife—who "is but fifteen years of age, and of a loving disposition, and had on three rattan hoops."

An English millionaire was in Cincinnati a few days ago, seeking opportunities to invest half a million of dollars in property there.

A testimonial from English actors to Dr. Bellows is suggested by Mr. Sidney, a comedian, in a letter to the London Era.

The citizens of Albion, N. Y., without distinction of party, have tendered a complimentary dinner to Hon. Sandford E. Church, State Comptroller elect.

Four ex-members of the Episcopal Church have been appointed to a Catholic mission in the city of Utica.

The health of Rev. Dr. Haight, of Trinity, is improving.

Charles Mackay's lectures are attracting large and fashionable audiences in Boston.

Matilda Heron and Sothern are playing in Cincinnati.

Francois Ravel has returned to Europe.

ILLINOIS STATE STOCKS.—THE SUBSCRIBERS offer for sale, at favorable rates, the following description of the securities of the State of Illinois:

£225—6 per cent. Coupon Bonds, due in July, 1870. The principal and interest of these bonds will be paid in the City of New-York. The State allowing 8 per cent. premium on principal and interest. Thus the bonds representing, as they do, $1,000, are actually $1,080 of principal, and on which amount interest is paid.

ALSO,

Six per cent. New Interest Stock, issued for arrears of interest under law of 1857. Interest on this stock does not commence until Jan. 1, 1860, when they become principal, and are then entitled to the benefit of the tax provided by the Constitution for the liquidation of the Internal Improvement Debt of the State, thus insuring the payment of this stock in a few years after that date.

The above offers a rare chance to invest in a first-class security, the payment of which does not admit of a doubt, as the proceeds of taxes levied to liquidate the state debt, added to the receipts from railroads, which are applied to the same purpose, are more than sufficient to meet her interest promptly, and to entirely extinguish the debt in about 10 years.

On July 1, 1857, the State owed $12,500,000. She cannot create any new debt, and is paying on account of principal over $1,000,000 per annum. Full particulars may be had on application to

These steamers, built expressly for Government service, with double engines under deck; every care has been taken in the construction of hull and machinery to insure safety and speed. The ships have five water-tight compartments, inclosing the engines, so that in the event of collision or stranding, the water could not reach them, and the pumps being free to work, the safety of the vessel and passengers would be secured. Recent experience has demonstrated the absolute necessity of this mode of construction. The accommodations for passengers are believed to combine every comfort and conv told a rambling story about being sick, taking medicine, having weak eyes and not being able to discern with one eye when the other was closed; his effort evidently being to exculpate himself. The Coroner took the candle and made a close examination of the young man's eyes, and declared he could see nothing the matter with them. The Coroner questioned him sharply as to what he saw on the night of the murder, and as to his statement in the lager-bier shop in William-street. Cerragoli said he was in William-street, and was standing on the opposite side of the street from Vincent's store, eating some crullers; the doors of Mr. Vincent's store were closed, but he saw through the glass some persons sitting down at a table with Mr. Vincent drinking. One of the men he recognized as a person he had seen in there the Sunday night previous; the others were sitting so he could not see their faces, but (falling back on his weak eyes again) he could not positively identify him; he could see distinctly enough across the street and through the glass doors to identify a person. The prisoners were here brought in, and he was requested to look and see if he recognized among them the person he saw in the store, but he could not recognize any one. He was then questioned as to what he told in the lager-bier saloon; he denied saying that he saw the whole affair, or that he would know them a hundred years.

THE LATE MURDERS.

The Coroner and Jury were so dissatisfied with this witness that they thought he ought to be detained, and an order was given for his commitment. The Coroner afterwards so modified the order that he might go at liberty upon procuring $1,000 bail, which he afterwards increased to $3,000. He directed the officer to produce the witness at nine o'clock this morning.

Towards the close of the proceedings the coroner took umbrage at some remark of a Herald reporter, and sharply reprimanded him, taking occasion to berate the press of this city for not seconding his strenuous efforts for the detection of crime. He declared his intention of keeping the reporters out of his courts, and gave an order not to admit them without an order from him. The reporter, however, gave him to understand that he should come there and take his seat notwithstanding the ukase. Then, said his honor, I shall take the liberty to put you out. Nothing serious, however, is expected to rise from this little blow-up.

Adjourned to 9 o'clock this morning.

Mr. JOSEPH WALTER, brewer, of Bushwick, brother-in-law of FRANCIS VINCENT, Jr., came in and stated that said FRANCIS VINCENT, Jr., was at his house in Bushwick at 5 o'clock of the afternoon of the murder; he also took supper and spent the evening at his house, and that they retired to bed about 10 o'clock. The house is about three miles from the ferry, being at the cross roads. That at a little after 2 o'clock in the morning three persons came to his house from the City, and brought the news of the murder of Mr. VINCENT. Mr. WALTER, on hearing the persons outside, waked young Mr. VINCENT, and he was near him at the time he opened the door. The first question the persons asked was if FRANCIS was there, and he answered that he was. He then was told of the murder, and afterwards communicated it to FRANCIS. The object of this statement was to remove the unjust imputations cast upon young Mr. VINCENT in connection with his father's murder.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.

Dr. Alexander B. Mott Assaulted with Clubs and Pistols—He Shoots one of his Assailants.

Dr. ALEXANDER B. MOTT was assaulted at the corner of Second-avenue and Seventh-street, yesterday morning, between 12 and 1 o'clock, by two ruffians, one of whom attacked him at first with an iron bar. The Doctor drew a revolver and shot one of them. At the same moment a pistol ball passed through the Doctor's hat, fired by one of his assailants. They succeeded in making their escape. The following is

CAPTAIN HART'S RETURN.

As Dr. A. B. MOTT was returning home from a professional call, between the hours of 12 and 1 A. M., he was assailed by two young men, at the corner of Seventh-street and Second-avenue. Annexed is an account written by himself, to weich we will add that strong hopes are entertained of bringing the whole matter to light, as the desperado has already been traced a long way by his blood. In this case we may say that, in our opinion, this deadly assault may very likely have come from the confederates of a desperate burglar in this Ward, who is now in prison, whose arrest Dr. MOTT contributed to bring about, and this may be in revenge for the same. This we throw out merely as an opinion. The gallant doctor gave them a warm reception.

DR. MOTT'S ACCOUNT.

Dr. ALEXANDER B. MOTT, residing at No. 209 Tenth-street, in the Seventeenth Ward, while returning from a sick call between 12 and 1 o'clock, and passing up the Second-avenue, was assaulted by two men on the corner of Seventh-street. He was struck on the back of the head with a small iron bar, at the same time was seized by the collar of his cloak, which became loosened by the button giving way. The Doctor turned immediately upon the robbers and drew a revolver, which he fired at the same time that one of the assailants fired at him. The ball from the man's pistol went through the Doctor's hat just clearing his head. The Doctor supposes that he shot one of the men either in the right arm or side, as he seized him with the other hand, which was covered with blood when he came to the Station-house. He held on to the man until he received a blow in the neck with a piece of iron, which threw him off his balance, when the tallest of the two men dragged the other away. An alarm was given, which the Police officer on the beat responded to immediately, but the men had made their escape through the Second-avenue by the time the officer got up to the Doctor. They both gave chase down to Fifth-street, and then went to the Station, from where the officers immediately went in search. No clue to the perpetrators as yet, but one of them will be easily recognized, as he has a wound on the right side, and it is to be hoped that any person called to attend such a wound, will report it immediately. Dr. MOTT is a witness in the case of JAMES BIGLAN, whose trial for burglary was to have taken place yesterday morning. It is supposed that the friends of BIGLAN were connected with the attack upon the Doctor. The Police have traced the assassin by his blood a long distance—how far, and in what direction, we refrain from stating, at the request of Capt. HART, lest the ends of justice should be defeated by our doing so.

The Woodman Case.

A CARD FROM GARDNER FURNESS.

The publication of Mr. WOODMAN'S card has presented an appropriate occasion for a statement to the public on my part which I have long desired to make, in order that I might refute the innumerable calumnies that have been promulgated in reference to the so-called "New-York Hotel Scandal." My acquaintance with Mrs. WOODMAN began in Paris, in October, 1854. My constant visits and attentions to her prior to the 15th of August last had always been not alone countenanced by, but seemingly agreeable to Mr. W. After an absence of about a year, Mr. W. returned to Paris on the 23d of July, 1855, and during his stay I was always a welcome guest at his apartments, and was constantly invited by him to join his family in the visits, excursions and amusements which make up the ordinary life of strangers in that gay capital. They left Paris for the United States on the 28th of August. I sailed from Southampton on my return to America on the 12th of the following month, consequently could not possibly have managed, as stated in the Tribune, October 7, "to entrap Mrs. W. into a correspondence which put into my hands a series of letters compromising her." On my return to New-York, in October, 1855, the relations between Mr. and Mrs. W. and myself continued; there was no secrecy about them, for none was required. In November, 1855, the WOODMANS left New-York for the South. In January, 1856, I went to New-Orleans, and remained until May; while there I lodged in the same hotel, sat next them at table, was a constant visiter in their apartments, with the full knowledge and consent of Mr. W., and so far from ever having the slightest cause to imagine my relations to his family objectionable to him, I had every reason to suppose quite the contrary. In August, Mr. and Mrs. W. came North—I visited them, as before, and accompanied them by invitation to Newport—that year Mr. and Mrs. WOODMAN went South, in October. I joined them in New-Orleans, in February, 1857, and remained until April, as usual, at the same hotel. On the 31st of May last, having occasion to visit Washington, on my way there, I stopped in Philadelphia, at the Girard House, where Mr. and Mrs. Woodman had been staying. I called upon Mrs. W. then, as well as upon my way back from Washington to New-York. On 15th August last I visited Mrs. W. at the New-York Hotel, and was received most kindly. There were two other persons in Mrs. W's. rooms at the time, Mr. W's. nephew and another, both of whom soon left. In about an hour and a half after their departure some one knocked at Mrs. W's. parlor door, and upon it being opened Mr. W. rushed in, handled Mrs. WOODMAN very roughly, so much so that she screamed, and with Bowie knife and revolver in hand, swore that he would kill either Mrs. W. or myself. Anxious to avoid a scene and the talk which might ensue if Mrs. W's. outcries continued, I shoved Mr. W. aside, as he says, and left without being shot or even shot at. As soon as practicable Mr. W. followed me, but as there were as yet no spectators, he has only to blame himself and his foolish publications for the scandal which ensued. Leaving the hotel I returned to my home, from which, by the by, (notwithstanding all that has been said to the contrary,) I have not been absent an entire day since. I expected, of course, to hear from Mr. W., but was disappointed.

On the 19th of August, Mr. WOODMAN, accompanied by Mr. C. L. THOMAS, (Mrs. W.'s brother,) left town for Philadelphia, the former to ransack Mrs. W.'s trunks and appropriate their contents, even to her clothing, which had been left in Philadelphia—the latter gentleman to escort some ladies on to Virginia. Upon Mr. W.'s return to this City, he requested a gentleman in whom he thought proper to confide, without having had any previous acquaintance with him, to call on me and endeavor to persuade me to give up Mrs. W.'s letters. Mr. WOODMAN stated to this gentleman that Mr. C. L. THOMAS suspected something was wrong before going away, but that he (Mr. W.) had allowed Mr. THOMAS to leave town without informing him of what had occurred. In the course of the day, the gentleman with whom Mr. W. had conferred, called upon me, conveyed Mr. W.'s wishes, and was authorized by me to state that no letters from Mrs. W. to me were in existence. My reason for saying so was, that Mr W., as I was informed from the same source, wished the letters to aid him in obtaining a divorce. On the 21st and 22d of August I received two notes from Mrs. WOODMAN, stating that she was closely confined, and that it would be impossible to describe Mr. W.'s unkindness and cruelty to her, and informing me that Mr. W. was willing to unite with her in proceedings for a divorce if I would marry her. I answered both these notes immediately, offering to do everything asked. Soon after this I was told, by the gentleman already alluded to, that Mr. W. knew of these two last notes being written to me by Mrs. W., and thus perceiving the object he had in view in favoring the plan suggested in them, I readily understood why my answers never reached Mrs. W.'s hands. The affidavit attributed to Mrs. WOODMAN, recently published, was gotten up on the 1st September, while Mr. WOODMAN was constantly with Mrs. W., at No. 150 East Eighteenth-street, driving out with her, and so forth. On the 4th of September Mr. WOODMAN called on a near relative of mine, gave him a full history of the New-York Hotel affair, and left the famous affidavit with him to read. Mr. WOODMAN called again on the 7th to procure it, and after a long conversation, in which the whole subject was talked over, left, expressing himself very much gratified with the interview. He offered to destroy the "affidavit" if Mrs. W.'s letters were given up to him, and was again given to understand that the letters were no longer in existence. Agreeably with his request he was then tendered by my relative an interview with me, which Mr. W. declined, unless it could take place in the presence of a third party, apprehending, as he said, a difficulty. I may as well state here that Mr. WOODMAN and myself met frequently in the City subsequent to the rencontre at the New-York Hotel, and that he has occasion to remember what passed at our last meeting, which took place at the entrance of the St. Nicholas Hotel on the 6th of October, the day he finally left for the South. The following day, the 7th, a false and scandalous article, emanating from WOODMAN, furnished from the office of the Courrier des Etats Unis, appeared in the Tribune, from which the following is an extract: "No one will be astonished to learn that she who has been the victim should be to-day in a house where health and afflicted reason are cared for together." On the 23d of October I received Mrs. WOODMAN's first letter from the Flushing mad-house, imploring me to rescue her from the tender mercies of Sanford Hall. My answer appeared in the Herald of the 26th:

"MADELINE: I did answer your two letters. I will be in the main street, in a carriage, on Monday, 26th, and Tuesday, 27th, from 12 until 2 o'clock. Meet me prepared."

—As requested by Mrs. W., in the "Personal" advertising column. On the 27th, I communicated with Mrs. W. again through the Herald:

"MADELINE: I was prevented from keeping my appointment yesterday by the weather. Meet me to-day, or the first fair day, between the hours of 11 and 2. Cheer up."

—And at her request went to Flushing; but she was unable to get out, owing, I presume, to the well-paid vigilance of the keepers. The third advertisement appeared in the Herald of the 28th:

"MADELINE: I was over yesterday, and will be on the Avenue again to-day, (28th,) rain or shine, from 11 o'clock until 3, after which, if unsuccessful, rely implicitly on me, and I will take the only means left to carry out your wish."

—And after waiting for Mrs. W. from the time appointed until 3 o'clock—no other means being left, I requested Mr. EDMUND HEARNE to serve the writ of habeas corpus on her behalf. Before going to Flushing, such arrangements were made by me as would have enabled Mrs. WOODMAN to proceed on her way home to her parents on that very day, with a female attendant, and under circumstances precluding the possibility of my being alone with her for an instant.

I have here given as briefly as possible a truthful narrative of the origin, progress and termination of my intercourse with the WOODMANS. That it was characterized by much that was imprudent is only to confess what is obvious to every one; but it must be equally apparent that I was allowed by Mr. W. to believe that my attitude was not misunderstood by him. He was a man of business—thought of nothing else—cared for nothing else. His wife was gay, young, and fond of society. All day and half the night he spent in his store; without children, she was lonesome in her drawing-room, and he encouraged me to suppose, as I always believed, that it was entirely agreeable to him that I should pass a great deal of my time in the society of his wife—thus enabling him to devote himself entirely to his affairs, and yet spare his wife the ennui of a cheerless home. This is, no doubt, all very wrong, and so far as it is so, I am willing to bear without a murmur the censure of the world. And this is the extent of my offence, down to the dénouement at the New-York Hotel. But Mr. WOODMAN's lawyer and friends have since endeavored to prejudice me in the estimation of society, by a series of false accusations as destitute of truth as they are offensive. If Mr. WOODMAN had taken my life on the eventful day in August, everybody would have said it was justly forfeited to him; but he has chosen rather to act the part of a poltroon, aiming epithets at me instead of bullets, disgracing himself as well as his wife, and wounding the feelings of her kindred as well as my own, by the shameless invention of a fabricated "affidavit." This so-called "affidavit," as was proved in Court, was never read to Mrs. WOODMAN; it appeared by the testimony, that she did not know its infamous contents, and that not a word of it was even written or dictated by her. The garbled passages passed off as extracts from my letters to her are substantially forgeries, because they consist of detached lines and phrases, so distorted as to have an apparent signification wholly different from the real meaning, as would have been palpable to every one if the whole context had been given. WOODMAN confesses in his "card" that at the very time Mrs. WOODMAN's signature was obtained to the affidavit, "she indulged in such free use of laudanum as to be quite incapable of realizing her condition." This I cannot doubt, as he ought to be familiar with the use of drugs, and considering the end he had in view, he surely did not allow her then to suffer from the want of them.

His statement in the Courrier des Etats Unis, predicated upon this same affidavit, declares she was then bereft of her own reason; her letters written at the same time, and now in my possession, implore me to seek for her some honorable protection from cruelties which she endures, but shrinks from the effort to describe. Plied by promises of pardon, which were afterwards broken—terrified by threats of vengeance, which were more than fulfilled—dogged night and day by an attorney whom a fee converted into an accomplice, (see PRITCHARD's testimony)—a signature to this paper was at length extracted from a sobbing, heart-broken woman, and then she was abandoned by her inquisitors and sent to a madhouse. And yet Mr. WOODMAN, in his tenderness, plaintively asks—"What else could I have done?" This paper, thus obtained, even Judge ROOSEVELT would not receive in evidence, although he did not hesitate to pursue a line of judicial conduct with regard to a writ of habeas corpus, which only the pen of a Junius can characterize, and for which no example can be found except in the dereliction imputed by Junius to MANSFIELD. Yet upon such testimony, pronounced worthless by a hostile court, I am arraigned by the press and, without a hearing, pronounced guilty of conduct only to be looked for among the basest and meanest of mankind.

Next I am blamed for my well-meant efforts to effect the release of Mrs. WOODMAN from her imprisonment at Sanford Hall. She appealed to me to rescue her from a loathsome custody. She described her wretchedness in language to which no one could remain insensible. She implored me to aid her to return to her parents. I did so. I took no steps in the matter except in compliance with her request. The application to the court for her release was not made until persuasion and stratagem had proved equally unavailing to restore her to liberty. Once more to use the language of Mr. WOODMAN in his card, "what else could I have done?"

It has been said by many that the writ of habeas corpus should have been applied for in the name of some other person. I would have preferred it myself; but how could it have been shown that the proceeding was undertaken at Mrs. WOODMAN's request? This object was strenuously urged, and had to be met by proof; and yet all communication with Mrs. W. was impossible, except through the advertising columns of the Herald.

Again, I am blamed for allowing the letters to be read which Mrs. W. addressed to me from Sanford Hall, in regard to her captivity there. I confess that it was with the deepest reluctance I did so; but the necessity was forced upon me by Mr. W.'s lawyer, who demanded proof that the proceedings for her release were undertaken at her request, and in this they were upheld by the Court. I was then forced to choose between abandoning the lady to her fate or resorting to her letters for such evidence—nowhere else to be had—as would secure her a hearing from a most reluctant Court. I authorized extracts from them to be used for this purpose and no other. But the lawyers of Mr. W. denied that the letters came from Mrs. WOODMAN, and demanded that they should be read in full, every word. To this, also, I was forced by the Court to yield, and so the letters were made public. And if any more proof were wanting of the absurd inventions of the oft-mentioned affidavit, it is to be found in these letters, written subsequently by Mrs. WOODMAN. Is it possible—can it be conceived—that any woman, even a Borgia, could, with a knowledge of its infamous accusations, sign the affidavit of Sept. 1, and in the very next month address the same person in terms of confidence, esteem and supplication? The supposition is, indeed, monstrous, when it is remembered that the affidavit was preceded by similar letters on the 21st and 22d of August.

If the space accorded to me would permit I could multiply reasons and accumulate facts almost without number, to show the injustice which has been done me by recent publications in regard to this unfortunate affair, whilst complete silence has been imposed upon me until the appearance of Mr. WOODMAN's card, for reasons which all will appreciate. It will not be long, however, before the whole truth will be given to the public, under the sanction of a judicial investigation. For the complete vindication of Mrs. WOODMAN and for my own exoneration, I am content to wait until then. For the present it will suffice for me to show, as I have shown,

First—That Mr. W. knew all about my relations with his family during the three years they continued, and never saw fit to object to them until it suited him to precipitate a scene at the hotel, in order to get rid of a wife whom he had long taken pains to alienate,

Second—That my efforts to obtain her release from Sanford Hall, where he had sent her "for revenge," as he declared, were made at her urgent and repeated requests, and that her sole wish and fixed purpose was to go to her father's house. (Mr. WOODMAN would make people believe that his wife "refused," in the early part of September, to go home with her brother, and yet that she freely consented to be immured in a private madhouse, two thousand miles away from her kindred.)

Third—That the use of her letters was forced upon me for her own sake, and was unavoidable.

Fourth—That the statements put forth by Mr. WOODMAN as emanating from his wife, under the solemn form of an affidavit, is a base fraud upon the public, a calumny upon me, degrading only those—the malignant client and the convenient attorney—who procured it to be published.

Mr. WOODMAN'S "Card" terminates like a piece of fireworks—in a sentence full of gunpowder. He intimates that if his "aim had been more successful in New-York," something dreadful might have happened. If, as I suppose, this Bob Acres intended to make the good people of New-Orleans believe that he fired a pistol at me, I can only assure my friends there that it must have been an air-gun, for nobody heard the report here; and it will provoke a smile in New-York, where it is well known Mr. WOODMAN had so many opportunies to do something desperate, to read his belligerent bulletin, written in the safe obscurity of a shop at the other end of the continent.

GARDNER FURNISS.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 19, 1857.

THE PETITION OF OLIVER O. WOODMAN FOR A DIVORCE.

From the New-Orleans Delta, Nov. 13.

OLIVER O. WOODMAN vs. CAROLINE THOMAS.—Second District Court, Judge P. H. Morgan.—Petition. To the Honorable the Judge of the Second District Court of New-Orleans, La.:

The petition of OLIVER O. WOODMAN, a citizen of the State of Mississippi, who has resided, since the year 1852, and who continues to reside now, for six or eight months of each year, in the city of New-Orleans, Louisiana, conducting the business of a wholesale druggist in said city and elsewhere, respectfully represents to your Honor: That on the 8th day of January, A. D. 1847, he was lawfully married, in the County of Hinds, State of Mississippi, to CAROLINE THOMAS, his present wife, and defendant to this suit. That, after their said marriage, your petitioner and his said wife resided at Vicksburg, Mississippi, permanently, until the year 1852, when your petitioner brought his said wife with him to New-Orleans, where she lived with him, except when absent, as hereinafter particularly stated. In July, 1854, your petitioner, having been persuaded by his wife that she had been suffering for several years with a complication of diseases peculiar to females, took her to Paris, France; and in November of that year, being compelled by the demands of business to return to America, he left his said wife in Paris in charge of a respectable family well known to your petitioner, and of the most skillful physicians in said city, and provided with ample means of procuring every luxury and comfort necessary to an invalid, and suitable to her rank and condition. After petitioner left Paris, his said wife became acquainted with one GARDNER FURNESS, of New-York, with whose mother and sister your petitioner and his wife had been acquainted in America. During the stay of his said wife in Paris, (as petitioner has recently ascertained,) said FURNESS succeeded, by a train of vile artifices, in winning the confidence and affections of his said wife, and secretly drawing her into such intimacies as placed her forever afterwards in his power. In September, 1855, your petitioner (having returned to Paris, and being unsuspicious of what had occurred, as above related,) brought back his said wife to America, and soon afterward said FURNESS returned to New-York, where your petitioner's wife then was, and in January, 1856, he followed her to New-Orleans, to which city she had a short time previously returned, and remained in the said city until the following May. That during the Winter of 1856-7 said FURNESS again came to New-Orleans, and remained at the St. Charles Hotel, in said city, for several months, your petitioner and his said wife being then at the same hotel. That in the Summer of 1857, your petitioner took his said wife to Philadelphia, where she remained from the last of May, at the house of a relative, part of the time, and at the hotel the remaining part, under the charge and medical treatment of a physician. That in July she went to Boston, where, and in the neighborhood of which, she remained alternately at hotels and with relatives, until the middle of August, when she went to New-York, and put up at the New-York Hotel, kept by Mr. CRANSTON, expecting, as she alleged, to meet your petitioner there. In the mean time your petitioner had, just before his departure from New-Orleans, discovered, for the first time, strong evidence of his wife's criminal intercourse with said FURNESS, and hurrying on to New-York, reached that city about the same time his said wife did, and so secretly as to detect the said CAROLINE and said FURNESS in a condition which admitted no doubt whatever of her guilt; and this discovery was followed up by disclosures which proved incontestibly that their criminal intercourse had lasted several years. Your petitioner therefore avers and charges, that at the various times and places above set forth, and especially at Paris, New-York, Boston and New-Orleans, his said wife CAROLINE carried on habitual criminal intercourse with, and committed adultery with the said FURNESS. Your petitioner further avers, that ever since his intermarriage with the said CAROLINE he has loved, cherished and protected her, and supplied all her demands lavishly; although her love of fashion, dress and display was inordinate, and occasioned your petitioner great inconvenience and unhappiness, and rendered her wholly unfit for domestic life; but that her ill-health, real or supposed, not only prevented any restraint upon her inclination, but forbade all suspicion of her want of fidelity to him or of adultery with another. That upon the discovery of her guilt, your petitioner took charge of her, and has placed her at his own expense among friends who will provide for her wants and prevent any future intercourse, (so long as she continues to be the the wife of your petitioner,) with said FURNESS. But your petitioner states that, except for the aforesaid purpose, and the further purpose of investigating the history of her disgrace, he has had no intercourse with her since the discovery aforesaid. Your petitioner further states, that he can no longer submit to married relation between him and his said wife, and is desirous of obtaining, as soon as the law will allow, a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, from the said CAROLINE. Your petitioner further states that his property was acquired chiefly before his marriage with said CAROLINE, or before the Summer of 1852, and while your petitioner lived permanently in Mississippi, where by law there is no community of property between man and wife. That since the summer of 1852 the extravagance of his said wife on her own account and that of said FURNESS has so nearly absorbed the net profits of his business, as well as the revenue of his estate, as to have prevented any accumulations of acquests and gains; but that, nevertheless, he considers it to be his duty, there being no issue of their said marriage, to make such provision for her future maintenance, voluntarily, and of his own free, untrammeled will, as will support her comfortably, to be continued so long as this petitioner shall deem it necessary, and no longer, it being his sincere desire to save her alike from the temptations of poverty and to keep her out of that circle of fashion and pleasure by which she has been already corrupted.

In view of the premises your petitioner prays your Honor to order a citation to issue, commanding the said CAROLINE THOMAS, wife of O. O. WOODMAN, to appear within the legal delay and answer this petition; and that, after due proceedings had, your Honor will adjudge and decree that your petitioner and the said CAROLINE be and remain perpetually divorced a vinculo matrimonii, and placed in the same condition, as respects each other, as if their said marriage never had happened; and for general relief in the premises.

JNO. M. CHILTON, of Counsel for Petitioner.

This case has not yet been set for trial, the defendant being absent and not represented, it would seem, by an attorney, up to the time when the reporter visited the Court yesterday.

LONG ISLAND.

A NEW DODGE.—A new dodge for robbing houses has been practiced quite extensively in Brooklyn lately. A female thief goes to a house agent and takes the keys of an unoccupied house, under the pretence of wishing to examine the premises with a view to hiring, but in reality to rob the house. Several houses have been stripped of the door knobs, bells, locks and gas fixtures recently, in this manner.

BURGLARIES AND THEFTS IN BROOKLYN.—House No. 72 Warren-street was entered Thursday night, and robbed of a quantity of clothing. House No. 100 Union-street, unoccupied, was robbed of gas-fixtures valued at $100. A horse and wagon was stolen from in front of a store on Columbia-street, Thursday night. The house of Mr. ALFRED COCK, on South Ninth-street, was entered, and several articles of clothing stolen and a small amount of money. The house of Mr. GEORGE ANDREWS, on the same street, was robbed the same night of an overcoat.

☞ Ex-Alderman LINSKEY, of Brooklyn, has been selected as a Deputy in the office of Secretary of State elect.

☞ The drilling of the Brooklyn Police was commenced, yesterday, by the Sergeants of Police.

FRIDAY, Nov. 20—P. M.

The European mails by the Niagara at Boston from Liverpool, Saturday, Nov. 7, were delivered at our Post-Office early this forenoon. In another part of this paper we have made copious extracts from the London papers on the change in the Bank of England's rate of discount. The nature of the latest money and cotton advices from this side, to which the present mail is responsive, will account in a considerable measure not only for the increased concern manifested in the London discount market, but for the somewhat lower figures reported for American Stocks. This news went out on Saturday, Oct. 24, by the steamship Vanderbilt. Our Stock Market had reacted from 5 to 10 ℔ cent. Our report of that day stated the whole decline in New-York Central equal to 11½ ℔ cent., or from 69¼@70 down to 58@58½ on the closing of Friday, Oct. 23. Reading shares left off at 24 ℔ cent., Erie at 9, Illinois Central at 76½, the Bonds at 63, and other Railways in proportion. The Sterling Exchange market was low and unsettled. Sales of Canada bills at 103½ ℔ cent., a rate which would materially increase the apprehension of further remittances from England in gold. In New-Orleans the rate was 90@95 ℔ cent., and middling Cottons down to 10c. These accounts were the worst from this side after the suspension of the Banks, and were doubtless the more discouraging because seemingly inconsistent with the stoppage of specie payments. The succeeding mail by the Asia, on Wednesday, Oct. 28, was more cheerful. That steamer would reach Liverpool the second day after the sailing of the Niagara. The Stock market had recovered 7@9 ℔ cent. on the decline of the previous week; New-York Central quoted 65½, Illinois Central 85 ℔ cent., and others in proportion. The Asia carried back $100,000 in Gold, and her mail replied to that by the Persia from the other side. London bills were up to 106@107 ℔ cent. The Cotton market without much alteration, owing to the Exchange trouble at New-Orleans.

The English Bank returns by this mail are to Wednesday, Nov. 4, pursuant to a change of day recently adopted in making up the weekly account. The Bullion reserve is down to £8,497,780, and the reserve of Notes Unemployed down to £2,155,215; the lowest point for both items known since the pressure of 1847. The active circulation of the Bank, however, is equal to one hundred millions of dollars, or £20,266,745, being a million sterling more than in June, 1856, when the rate of interest was 4½ ℔ cent., or just one-half the present rate. The private discounts of the Bank are up to £22,628,251. In regard to American Securities, and the general look of the English markets, our London correspondents, Messrs. ROBERT BENSON & Co., write as follows:

Per Niagara.] LONDON, Friday, Nov. 6, 1857.

We had to notice in our last Circular an improved tone of feeling toward the close of that week. This was not, however, of long continuance. Disappointment has been felt that the export of Specie to the United States has continued on a scale not anticipated upon the suspension of Specie payments by the Banks of New-York and Boston, and further upon this proceeding not having, according to the recent advices, given instant relief to the mercantile community in consequence of the continued restrictive policy pursued by these Banking Institutions. The demand for Money and for discount accommodation has been excessive. Yesterday the Bank of England advanced their minimum rate of discount to 9 ℔ cent. A gloomy feeling prevails, and fears are entertained that the high rate of interest, and the course of events in the United States, may jeopardize certain classes of the mercantile community at home.

In our last circular we quoted Consols at 89⅜@⅝ for money and 89⅝@¾ for the 10th instant. The quotations to-day are 88⅜@⅝ for money, and 89@¼ for 7th December. The market for American Securities is less buoyant, and since the receipt of less favorable accounts from the United States, prices generally have receded. Transactions have taken place in Illinois Central 7 ℔ cent. Construction Bonds at 76, 75, 76¾, 75, and in the Shares at 7, 5,
